World Relief Sale raises $63,000

BY WENDY WEHR

LANCASTER — Through the generosity of many area dairy farmers, a sum of $63,000 was raised Thursday at the World Relief Heifer Sale. All of the sale proceeds will go to the Mennonite Central Committee for distribution to the hungry and needy around the world

All of the 74 head of cattle and various other auction items that were sold were donated by area farmers. As the first heifer entered the sale ring, Edgar Stoesz, associate executive secretary of the Mennonite Central Committee, thanked both donors and buyers for their generosity.

Remarking on the "sad condition of agriculture around the world," Stoesz stated that even American agriculture is now in a state of crisis. "This neglect of agriculture is something we will all regret," he remarked.

To bring home his point, Stoesz quoted from a speech by William Jennings Bryan, given at the Democratic National Convention in 1896. Said Bryan, "Burn down

Farm Bureau adds its ideas to the Farm Bill debate

Compiled from news reports

WASHINGTON – The American Farm Bureau has injected a long-awaited Farm Bill proposal of its own into the melting pot of arguments and counter-arguments that will determine farm policy for years to come.

The Bureau, the nation's largest general farm organization, has proposed that dairy price supports and commodity loans for major export crops be tied to formulas that depend on market prices rather than arbitrary political numbers.

Officials at the U.S. Department of Agriculture said the department and the Reagan Administration were not prepared to comment on the Farm Bureau proposal at this time.

They did indicate, however, that the Farm Bureau's plan is being studied closely in Washington and parts of it eventually may be accepted into package that ultimately receives Administration backing.

Under the Farm Bureau plan, dairy price supports are tied to a supply-demand "adjuster" reflecting market reality, according to a summary provided by the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, a Farm Bureau member organization.

Milk would be supported at 90 percent of a three-year average all-milk price, adjusted up or down according to expected levels of government purchases.

Price support adjustments, not to exceed three percent in any six-month period, could be made by the Secretary of Agriculture, if net purchases are estimated to exceed eight billion pounds of milk equivalent within a year, under the Farm Bureau legislation.

The plan also outlines a "commodity bonus" that allows one-third of excess Commodity Credit Corp. or farmer-owned reserve stocks to be used each year as an export incentive.

The bonus has been designed to move surplus commodities while also offering a way to retaliate against other nations that have undersold us in world markets through their own form of subsidies.

The plan would also set commodity loans for feed grains, wheat, soybeans and rice at 75 percent of the five-year average market price, excluding the highest and lowest years, with annual adjustments of no more than 10 percent.

Target prices would be frozen at this year's level for 1986, and would be set at 110 percent of the same average market prices used to set commodity loan rates, beginning in 1987. Prices could not be adjusted more than five percent in a year.

Other features of the plan include:

- Elimination of the farmer-owned grain reserve.
- Establishment of a seven to 15 percent conservation reserve program.
- Reduction of feed-grain acreage when carryover stocks exceed specified levels.

Farm Bureau economists estimate that the plan submitted by the 3.3-million-member organization would cost an average of $6.8-billion a year.

"American Farm Bureau's farm bill is more flexible and more market responsive than other farm bills which have already been introduced," PFA President Keith Eckel said in releasing the proposal. "The Farm Bill being presented today represents the thinking of over 90 percent of the food and fiber producers in

Nat'l RCWP Committee reviews Rural Clean Water Project here

BY JACK HUBLEY

LANCASTER — U.S. Department of Agriculture and Environmental Protection Agency officials making up the Rural Clean Water Program's National Coordinating Committee came to Lancaster County this week to review the county's RCWP project.

Convening at Lancaster's Conestoga Resort Inn on Wednesday and Thursday, the group included local, state and federal officials, as well as Extension Service personnel.

A pilot program aimed at demonstrating the effectiveness of agricultural Best Management Practices, the Conestoga Headwaters Rural Clean Water Program encompasses 110,000 acres and 1,250 farms in the northeastern corner of Lancaster County and extending into Berks County. Farmers contracting with the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), the agency responsible for administrating the program, receive federal cost-share funds to implement a water quality plan drafted by the Soil Conservation Service (SCS).

"I don't regret that we've gone with this, and we look forward to some answers coming out of it," said Aaron Stauffer while addressing members of local, state and national coordinating committees during a tour of the Stauffer farm's water monitoring facilities.

Dairy expert says

Cattle sales contracts unfair to dairymen

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — Dr Ronald Buffington, Holstein breeder from Ohio, urges Pennsylvania dairymen to promote their cows, their products and their own self-interests.

Speaking around the state last week as part of the Holstein Forums, Buffington made it clear that he feels dairymen are being taken unfair advantage of with the popular "terms" of contracts with high-selling cattle in public sales

Pointing out that the sellers of many of the highest price cows never collect all the money that is due, he said, "The economics of selling registered Holsteins is not fair to the breeder "

Buffington stated that "there are some people willing to buy and not pay." He strongly suggested that breeders make contracts "binding enough that we can collect." As owner of Rosebuff Associates, Buffington gained recent experience by selling a high-priced animal in the exclusive "South Fork" sale in Dallas, Texas

Buffington also took the state and national breed associations to task for offering no support to dairy breeders in contract sales The national association, he said, simply wants to register cattle

To illustrate his point, Buffington took the example of a cow that sells for $100,000 Terms are often $25,000 in a year, $25,000 in the next year, and $25,000 in the next year. The sales agency takes its 15 percent commission off the first payment, and after advertising and other expenses are deducted the dairyman may be left with $5,000

The rest of the money he may never see because of the way the terms are written. The cow may not be treated well and therefore becomes less valuable, or it could die. Sometimes a cow is resold and the original seller has still not been paid

To make sales more fair to the breeder, Buffington suggests that terms be made 40 percent up front and two more payments of 30 percent each "We as breeders shouldn't have to absorb everything," he added Therefore, the sales force should receive their commission in three equal payments.

Buffington advocates asking bankers to stand up and be counted, and having them approve

TOP COWS MAKE TOP PROFITS

New HI-YIELD #528 is a specially formulated MAXIMUM ENERGY dairy concentrate. Since energy is nutrient that most often keeps cows from reaching their maximum productive and reproductive potential, Pennfield has developed a line of high energy feeds.

Hi-Yield feeds contain REFINED ANIMAL FAT which was recently shown by university research to be a better energy source for ruminants than vegetable oil. In addition to the added energy from fat, Hi-Yield feeds are formulated with BUFFERS, BY-PASS PROTEIN, METHIONINE - an amino acid which has been shown to increase milk and butterfat production, and ZINPRO® - a zinc supplement that has been shown to decrease somatic cell count in milk and decrease the incidence of foot rot.

To Prevent Water Pollution

The quality of our water supplies is very important, and in most cases it should receive more attention. Many people have wells with high bacteria count and/or with high nitrates, both of which are undesirable for domestic and livestock consumption.

When feedlots and barns are cleaned out this spring, every effort should be made to incorporate this manure into the topsoil as quickly as possible. With liquid manure, the soil injection type of applicator does an excellent job. With other types of surface spreaders, the manure should be disced or plowed into the topsoil soon after application. This is especially true on slopes above water supplies.

The application of fertilizers warrants the same attention; mix it with the topsoil very soon after application. Also surface water should be directed away from wells or any other water supply.

To Check Ventilation Systems

We are into the season of the year that ventilation is very important. The fans in our poultry houses and dairy barns have been working hard through the winter months. They have accumulated dust on the louvers and screens and developed loose belts, so they are less efficient — in other words they are not moving as much air as they are rated.

This is a good time to go through your buildings and clean the fan blades, the louvers and screens. Tighten the fan belts, and be sure to check the inlet screens. Many times, in our poultry houses in particular, we're not getting air circulation because the air can not get into the building. Clean these inlet screens so they are not restricting air.

Also, be sure to check the thermostats to make certain they are working properly.

Poor ventilation can cause health problems in poultry houses and "off" flavored milk in dairy barns. This is a good time to take care of some of these inside jobs.

To Control Wild Garlic

We may like onions on our hamburgers and in other foods, but very few of us like onion-flavored milk. This can easily happen on dairy farms where wild garlic plants are allowed to grow.

Many pastures are infested with wild garlic. One of the best times to start control measures on this weed is early in the spring when the young plants are four to eight inches high.

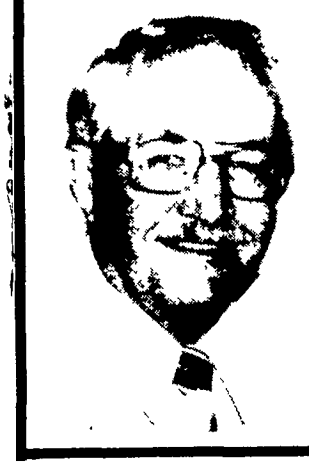
An application of 2,4-D will knock them down. Follow the label for directions. When this is applied around the middle to latter part of March, little damage is done to any legume in the area. If garlic plants are allowed to mature each year, the pasture area will become so contaminated that dairy cows cannot utilize the grass.

To Control Mice in Orchards

Now that the winter weather is almost gone, our fruit growers should take a look at the newly-exposed grass sod in their orchards. If there are runways at the suface of the grass, it is a good sign that there are plenty of mice in the orchard, even though a mouse baiting program may have been followed last fall.

The mice have used up their stock piles of stored food and are now looking for a fresh supply. At this time of the year they will move quickly onto bark and roots of fruit trees

Fruit growers should rebait their orchards as soon as possible if there are fresh mouse signs.



The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

MORE HAY THIS YEAR, A ROSY TALE

A few years back, my closest neighbor was Roy. Everyone called him "Rosy" because of his pleasant disposition. He was a great guy, a fellow who would give you the shirt off his back if you needed it. He also had a quick smile for everyone, a smile punctuated by little dribbles of tobacco juice on each side. Rosy seemed to fit him better than Roy.

"Rosy" leaned over the fence to talk while his team rested under the row of locust trees that shaded the lane between our farms. He was plowing under last year's hay field, which was mostly ragweed and sorrel, with a smattering of timothy and alsike clover still showing. On this balmy spring morning, Rosy was in a somber mood as he swabbed his blue bandana around his crinkled neck.

"I can't quite figure out why my hay field petered out so bad last year," he mumbled between squirts aimed at a No Hunting sign on my side of the fence. "I'm just about ready to give up on spendin' money on clover seed. Can't get the Red's to catch at all, and even the Alsike is too thin to count. Sure wish I could get a stand of alfalfa like you got there."

Well, Rosy being a lot older than I was, I wasn't about to give him advice unless he asked me first. I had bought the farm next to his only two years before, and the first thing I did was test the soil. That is nothing new in this day of enlightened farming, but was an innovation in the early 1940's. The soil tests on my farm were extremely high in potash and phosphorus, but showed a pH of 5.0 to 5.6. All I needed was lime, and lots of it. And I was pretty sure that that was about all that Rosy's hay field needed too. But he didn't believe in 'spending money' on lime. After all, he had to spend too much time hauling limestone rocks off the fields. Limestone soil shouldn't need lime anyway, should it?

His curiosity got the better of him when he saw the lime spreader pull into the next field. After he asked what the big idea was, I was finally able to explain that it was the lime that was unlocking the excess potash and phosphorus and making it available to the alfalfa and corn. The previous owner had been a heavy user of fertilizer, but didn't believe in lime either. I was reaping the benefit of years of heavy fertilizer applications on my farm, at a minimal cost of a few loads of lime. And alfalfa was now growing profusely on land that barely supported a thin stand of clover before.

Poor old Rosy was somewhat impressed by the think stand of alfalfa on my side of the lane, but not totally convinced that it could be duplicated on his land. A couple of years later he decided to throw in the towel and quit farming. He moved to town, and lived out his days working for a large dairy plant as a dock hand.

Now this corny little tale has a moral, as you might suspect. My respect for a good neighbor is not diminished by his lack of foresight in farming. Rather, it was my good fortune to buy that farm of his, remove the locust tree lined fencerow, and lay out contour strips across the lane that separated the

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

COMPLETING THE TASK
March 17, 1985

Background Scripture: John 17.
Devotional Reading: John 16:17-24.

Jesus uttered a phrase of ten words that I too would like to be able to say before my life's end here on earth: "...having accomplished the work which thou gavest me to do" (17:4). Can you think of any other words with which you would want to meet your Maker?

Jesus began life, his parents knowing that God had sent him for a purpose. His ministry commenced several decades later when he dedicated himself to fulfill that purpose for which he was sent. His brief ministry was dominated by his resolve to fulfill his reason for being and it was also his dedication to it that eventually took him to the cross, leading him at the very end to declare, "It is finished!"

A MAN OF PURPOSE

Jesus was a man with a mission in life and in John 17 he spells out some of the particulars of his mission. "I have manifested thy name to the men whom thou gavest me..." (17:6), he says. "I have given them the words which thou gavest me". (17:8) Furthermore, he has "kept them in thy name." And also: "The glory which thou hast given me I have given thee" (17:22). It had been a "tall order" but he had accomplished all that God had given him.

These were not just a few idle ideas that came to him in a brief moment. Jesus had spent much time in thought and prayer considering just what it was that God desired of him and how he might accomplish it. It was the one thing above all else that dominated his life: more than pleasing the crowds, much more than winning titles and popularity, he deeply desired to please the Father who sent him.

BEING SENT

Jesus, however, was not the only one brought into the world to fulfill a specific purpose. Jesus taught his disciples that they also were to seek diligently to accomplish whatever God gave them to do. As Jesus prayed, "As thou didst send me into the world, so I have sent them into the world" (17:18).

During the Christmas holidays, we watched on TV that old Jimmy Stewart film classic, "It's A Wonderful Life." If you have seen it, you will remember that the man played by Stewart, frustrated, depressed and defeated, expresses out loud the wish that he had never been born. Hearing these words, his guardian angel arranges to show him all the things that never would have happened, all the lives that would not have been touched and enriched if he had never been born.

I couldn't help but think of my own life. Each one of us has a God-given opportunity to accomplish something worthwhile while we are on this earth. We too are people with a purpose and can never really be content until we can say with Jesus, "... having accomplished the work which thou gavest me to do."

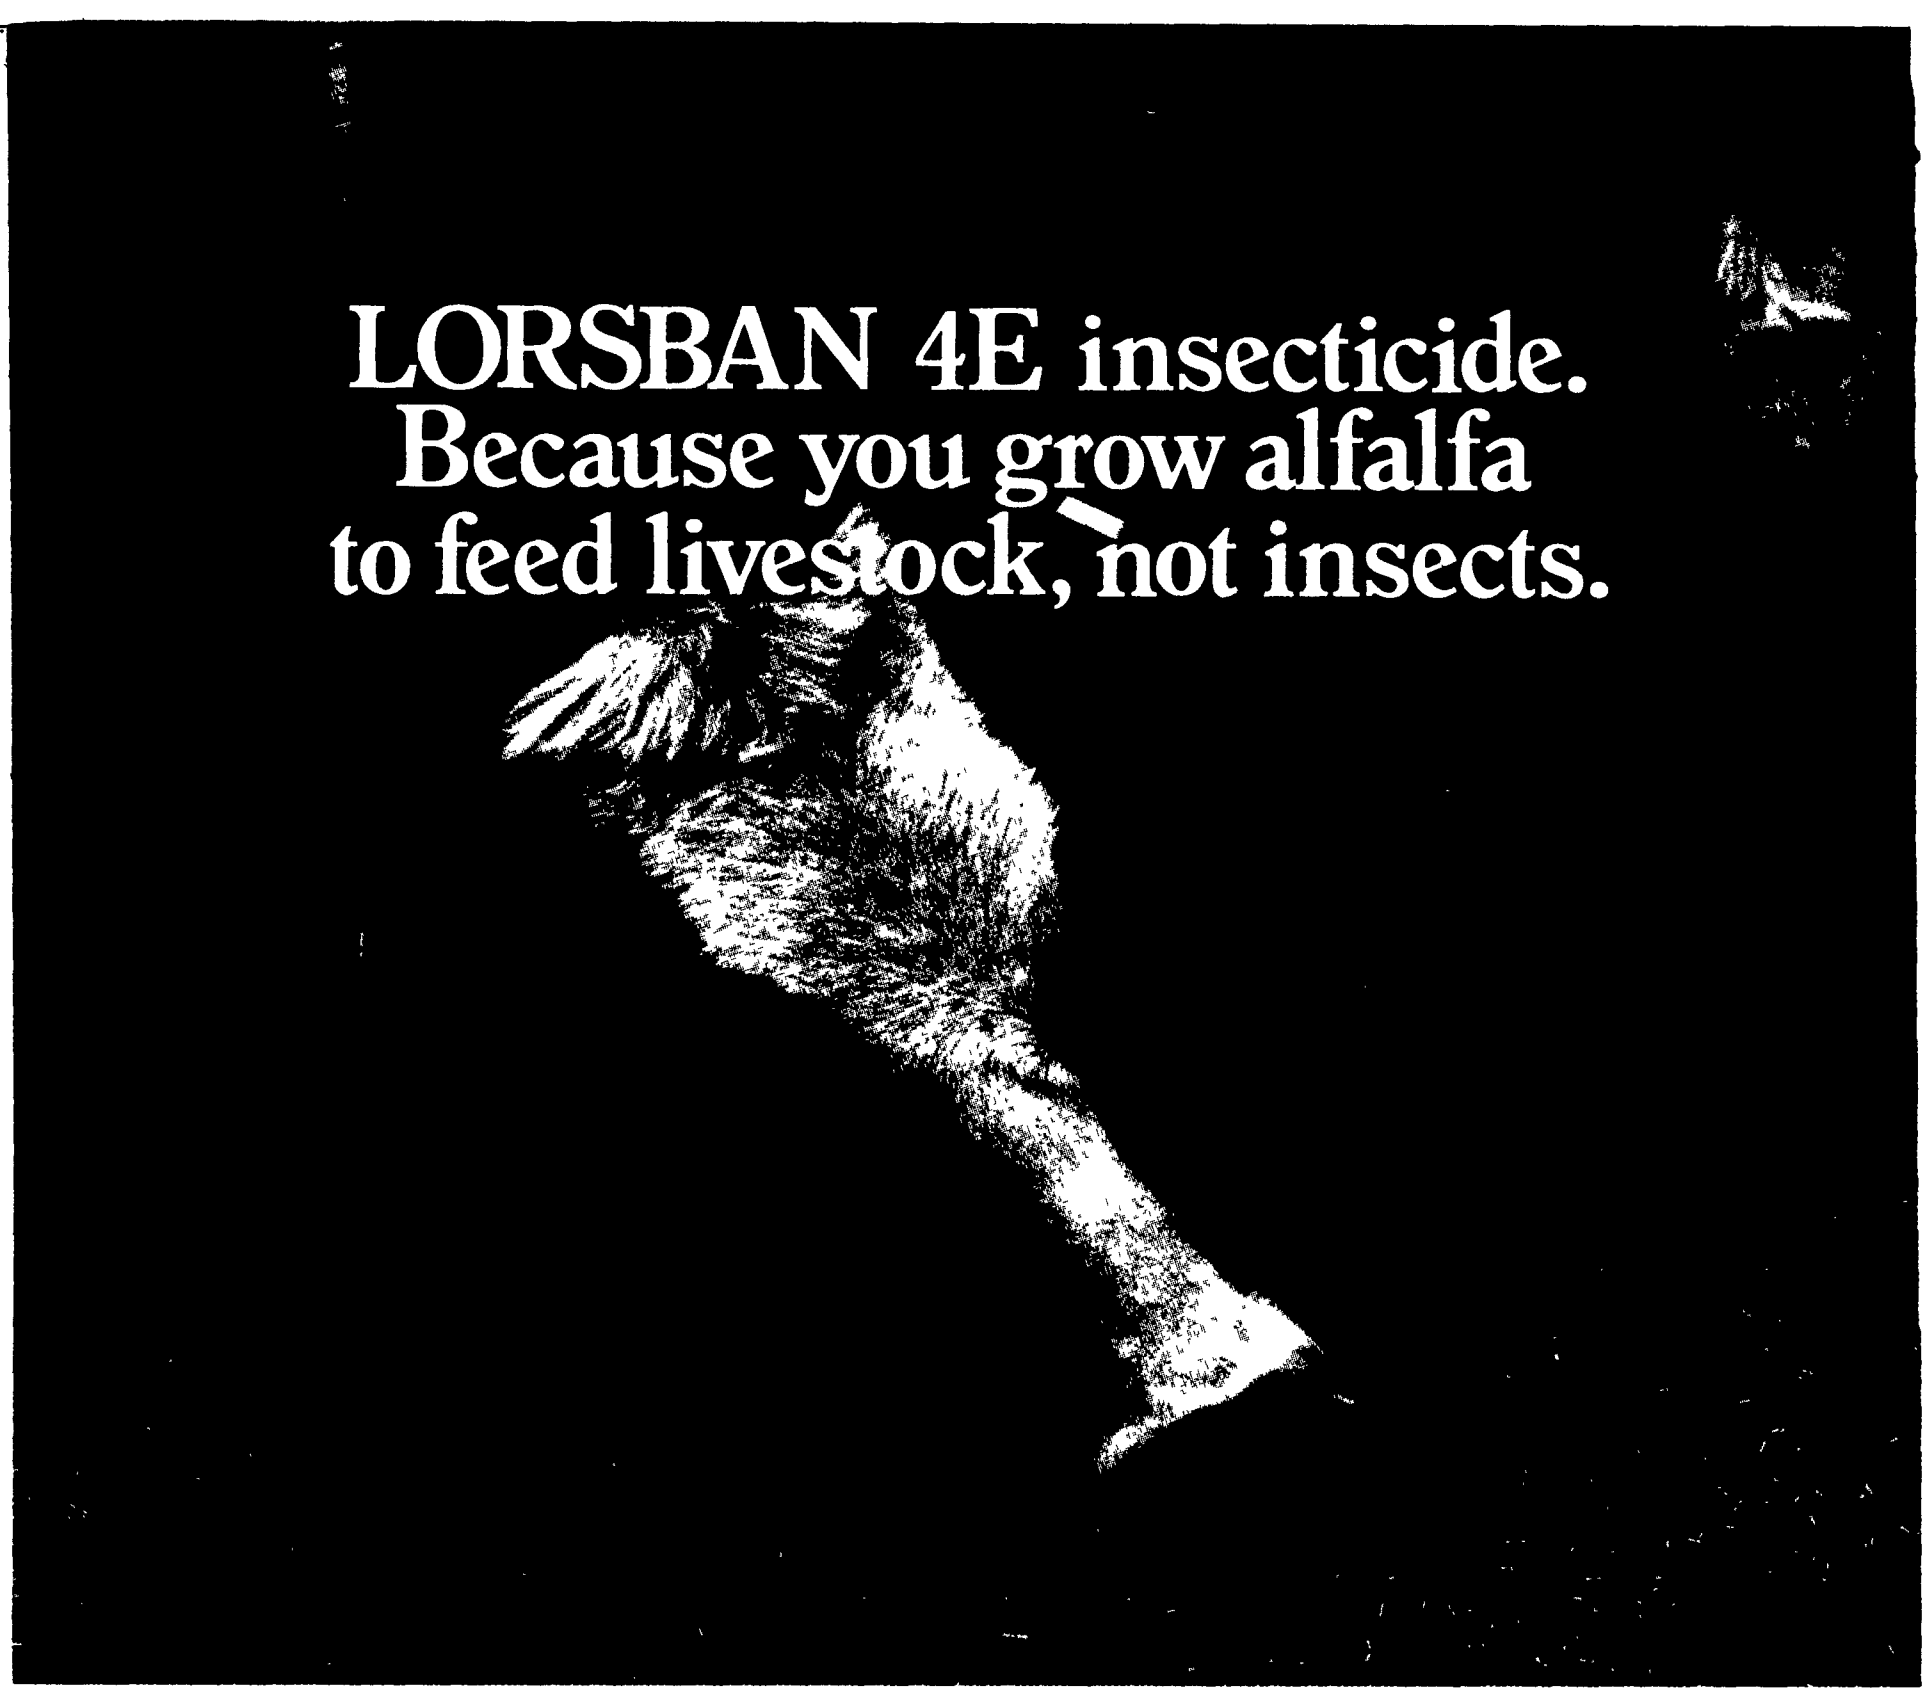
LORSBAN 4E insecticide. Because you grow alfalfa to feed livestock, not insects.



In the Northeast, you grow alfalfa for animals, not insects. That's why it's important to choose an insecticide that will stop nutrition robbing insects.

LORSBAN* 4E insecticide provides excellent control of alfalfa weevils and leafhoppers. LORSBAN 4E controls other destructive alfalfa pests, too, such as alfalfa blotch leafminers, spittlebugs and aphids, to name three.

And because LORSBAN 4E is not a Restricted Use Pesticide it's easier to use, particularly in ground applied treatments.†

Once you compare the performance, the ease of handling and the cost, you'll see why more and more alfalfa growers in the Northeast are switching to LORSBAN 4E insecticide.

†LORSBAN 4E is a Restricted Use Pesticide in New Jersey as required by state law.
Regardless of the insecticide you choose, ALWAYS READ THE LABEL BEFORE USE AND ALWAYS CAREFULLY FOLLOW ALL LABEL DIRECTIONS AND PRECAUTIONS for safe use.

Pennfield names 23 to President's Club

LANCASTER — Twenty-three dairy farmers from throughout the company's service area have been named to Pennfield Corp.'s President's Club.

The dairymen received their awards at the firm's annual Dairy Awards Banquet Wednesday at the Good 'n Plenty restaurant.

To achieve membership in the club, dairymen had to reach either the milk production or butter fat standard the company established for their particular breed.

The standards were 20,000 pounds of milk or 700 pounds of butterfat for Holsteins, 17,500 pounds of milk or 650 pounds of fat for Brown Swiss or Ayrshire, 13,500 pounds of milk or 650 pounds of fat for Guernseys, and 13,000 pounds of milk or 625 pounds of fat for Jerseys.

The dairymen honored included:

• John and Barbara Brubaker, Knott Run Farm, Christiana, whose 60 head of cows averaged 21,073 pounds of milk and 794 pounds of butterfat.

• Robert E. Pepple, Pep-L-Lea, Oxford, whose 65-head herd averaged 19,979 pounds of milk and 783 pounds of butterfat.

• G. Hershey and Evelyn Hostetter, Mil-Valli, Gap, whose 38 head of Holsteins averaged 19,715 pounds of milk and 755 pounds of fat.

• Ray McMillen, Ray-Mc Farm, Loysville, who obtained an average of 19,950 pounds of milk and 739 pounds of milkfat from his herd of 70.

• Paul J. King, Pa-Dot Holsteins, Cochranville, whose herd of 74 averaged 19,098 pounds of milk and 735 pounds of butterfat.

• George Lamborn, Friskyacres, Nottingham, whose 36 cows produced an average of 19,428 pounds of milk and 729 pounds of butterfat.

• Leslie King and Sons, Kingstead Farms, Damascus, Md., whose herd of 95 cows produced 18,602 pounds of milk and 725 pounds of fat.

• Norman and Harold Davis, Daland Farms, Huntingdon, who farms. It took a lot of lime to sweeten his land, but the resulting crops of corn and alfalfa brought forth many a hearty congratulation from Rosy. And he could [illegible] the results of my actions, even though [illegible] was never convinced that it would work for him.

I often wonder now many other small farms that never quite seem to produce at profitable levels could benefit from some top level technology. Even such a small thing as a complete soil test, properly interpreted and implemented, would make the difference between a Peter Tumble Down and a Garden of Eden. But then, maybe Rosy's nicotine smile was worth more than his labors on the land!

Omaha Weekly

Report Supplied by USDA

Fed cattle prices on the Omaha terminal held steady through this week, although the day-to-day undertone pointed lower. Buyer demand proved good, as many operated with small line inventories and required cattle for near-term slaughter needs. Overall finish continued fairly attractive, although numbers of Y.G. #4's showed some increase. Muddy cattle still presented problems to the trade. Cows 1.00 higher. Bulls steady.

Estimated 5 day receipts 7500, actuals last week 6994 and last year 12789. Steers comprised 47 pct of the week's receipts; Heifers 34 pct; Cows 10 pct; Feeders 8 pct.

Direct Marketing-some of the basic principles

DEBBIE STILES-RENZI
Staff Correspondent

MORGANTOWN, W.VA. – Some in agriculture still desire to be producers exclusively and let a middleman-wholesaler or other broker do the marketing of their harvest.

However, the majority of vegetable and fruit growers are now seeing the increased profit opportunities presented by direct marketing.

So how does a farmer, after years of selling wholesale, get involved in the retailing of his/her product? Though most enter direct marketing alone after a solitary, sometimes haphazard decision process, a group of over 100 growers, retailers and direct marketing experts gathered in Morgantown recently to share their skills, knowledge, experience and concerns. Many of the "tips" presented by the group founding the new West Virginia Direct Marketing Association have potential application and benefit for most farmers.

Direct markets encompass four types of retail options:

•Tailgate markets, where produce is sold off the farmer's truck, usually from the side of a highway.

•Farmer-owned/operated roadside stands, where the harvested produce and possibly other products are sold from a permanent structure built beside a thoroughfare.

•Farmers' markets, a city-, county-, state-, or in rare cases independently-owned market set up at a central location for area farmers to bring their produce to sell.

•Pick-your-own operations, which bring the consumer to the farm in order to harvest their own produce.

All four of these options require different levels of management and varying amounts of labor and time commitment from the farmer. They also are similar in several areas, making it possible to learn about direct marketing through study of some basic principles.

KNOW THY CONSUMER

In order for a farmer to be an effective direct, marketer, he/she must understand the customer's perceptions.

"Your're dealing with people," Dr. Richard Rund, Horticulturist from Ohio State University put it succinctly.

If farmers want the bigger profit cut tht a retail price offers them, they must "read" the consumer correctly, know the market, and use the "tricks" of the retailing trade to get the product sold.

One farmer who has used these "tricks" to a profitable advantage is Boyd Meadows of Milton. In 1970 he farmed strictly for sale to wholesale buyers. Then he opened a roadside market, an open-air market, and began to sell his produce at the Charleston tailgate market as well. Now, with his son in charge of field crops, his wife taking care of the business end and Meadows himself heading up greenhouse production and running the markets, this mild-mannered Cabell county farmer has 45 acres in vegetable production, 50 in apples and peaches, and five in PYO strawberries, in addition to 60,000 square feet of greenhouse space.

Meadows has gone into direct marketing in a big way; since 1970 when his first day's take was a humbling $28.00, Meadows now has a healthy-six figure gross income with eleven full-time and six part-time employees on his payroll. He lists four things to consider in establishing a roadside market:

• Location. Choose a well-traveled road for the market's location, to insure an adequate sales volume.

• Set Up. Keep things orderly, allow space for adeqaute parking, and have a full, attractive display area. Meadows emphasized the importance of keeping a display case full of produce. "If you run out, you didn't have enough to start with," he told the audience. The more that is displayed, the more sold.

• Quality. In the produce business, perhaps more than any other, a reputation is built on a "word of mouth" basis. Advertising, it has been shown in West Virginia, whether it is radio or newspaper, is effective mainly to introduce the new operation to the community initially, or as a means of letting established customers know when crops are ready to pick, and not to increase customer numbers. The produce a farmer sells directly to the consumer must be of premium quality in order that people might "pass the word" – a favorable word–on to their neighbors.

• Pricing. "Three heads for a dollar" sells cabbage better than "Twelve cents a pound". Why? Consumer preferences indicate that certain items are best marketed by the piece instead of by the pound. More produce will be sold if the farmer markets it keeping these preferences in mind.

Other surprising facts to consider at peak months and seasonality of sales. May, Boyd Meadows related, is a "sleeper" month.

While most direct marketers think July is the top grossing month, in actual fact May is Meadow's top sales period and can be for other producers, too.

Fresh, green, spring vegetables are appealing to the consumer after a long, cold winter.

With a little extra effort and utilization of black plastic and clear poly tunnels, growers can market some early produce when prices are quite favorable and demand is heavy. Of course, using greenhouses to get a head start or to propagate bedding or vegetable plants for consumers is also a moneymaker in spring.

Surprisingly, while getting a jump on spring is advantageous, Meadows warns potential growers of the dangers of selling out of season.

West Virginians are very seasonally-oriented in their food choices, and trying to sell anything, late or "out of season" can be a marketing disaster. "Sell strawberries in strawberry season," Meadows advised.

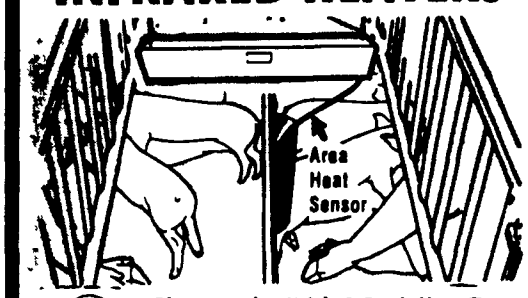
INFRARED HEATERS



"The Brooder With A Brain"
it thinks for itself

NO OVERHEATING—NO CHILLING: A solid-state control and sensor act better than a brooder thermostat to automatically regulate radiant heat output to within ±½° of setting.

SAVE PIGS—REDUCE PILING: Pigs spread out comfortably under blanket of infrared heat.

SAVE ENERGY, TIME, LABOR: Downgoing infrared heats pigs, not the air. Set automatic control and forget it; sensor allows constant temperature below heater. Controlled infrared is the most economical form of clean electric heat. No moisture or carbon monoxide produced as with gas heaters!

VARIOUS MODELS: Choose individually controlled heaters or a centrally controlled system, automatic or manual regulation. Kalglo heaters have durable metal sheath heat elements (no glass tubes to break) and come ready to plug in and use. Larger models also available for nursery and finishing pens.

Grassland FFA names Herr, and Horning Star Farmer

BY GLENN B. KNIGHT

BLUE BALL – Grassland Chapter FFA and Margaret Herr and Nelson Horning Grassland Star Farmers during their 26th annual banquet here.

Floyd Huber was given the Star Red Rose Farmer title while Darryl Weaver walked away with the Star Red Rose Agribusinessman award. The Star Chapter Farmers are Lamar Gockley and R. Earl Sauder. Two Star Greenhands were named: Robert Freeman and Sean Bailey.

Bringing greetings from the state association was Vice President Timothy Pfautz, from nearby Cloister Chapter. He stressed that goals and attitude were the keys to success and urged the 225 members, parents and guests to set goals high enough so that they truly need to be worked for.

FFA Foundation awards were presented to: Lavon Stauffer, electrification; Nelson Horning, mechanics; Kevin Martin, processing; David Fisher, sales and service; E. Earl Sauder, beef production; Lamar Gockley, dairy production and Margaret Herr, diversified livestock production. The Specialty Animal Production Award was given to Mark Zimmerman while Brian Hurst received the Fish and Wildlife Management Award.

Other Foundation awards included: Fruit and Vegetable Production, Wade Martin; Home and Farmstead Improvement, Kevin Redcay; Horse Proficiency, Laura Mummert; Placement in Ag Production, Ray Schlouch; Poultry, Darryl Weaver; Sheep, Lisa Martin; Swine, Floyd Huber and Soil and Water Management, Thomas Steffy. Greenhand Tammy Martin won her division in Prepared Public Speaking and Bonnie Kachel took the honor in the senior group with Julie Hess winning in the extemporaneous category. Lynford Zimmerman was tops in Turf and Landscape Management.

Jersey Cattle Club offers genetic recovery plan

COLUMBUS, Ohio – Do you have any unregistered, purebred Jerseys? If so, there is a program designed to help you upgrade your herd and improve your dairy operation.

Ever since 1975, Jersey dairymen across the country have been using the Genetic Recovery Program to identify and record their unregistered, purebred Jerseys. Over 75,000 Registered Jerseys have resulted.

Genetic Recovery Jerseys have topped sales across the country, won top honors at major shows, made outstanding production records and produced young sires that have been sampled by major AI bull studs.

The program is as easy as 1,2,3! Your unregistered Jersey cow sired by an unknown bull or by a grade Jersey bull will become the Original Animal and carry the OA prefix on her name. A dead cow that was sired by a Registered Jersey bull but who has living daughters in the herd can also be an OA. The OA fee is $5.

In step 2, the daughter of an OA sired by a Registered Jersey bull is eligible for the Provisional Register and will carry the PR prefix on her name. The PR fee is $7.

If the PR cow meets certain production and type qualifications, her daughters are eligible for step 3, Genetic Recovery, and will carry the GR prefix. Cows with the GR prefix are fully registered. The GR fee is the minimum for registered Jerseys.

For complete information, proper forms and FREE assistance, write or call: The American Jersey Cattle Club, P.O. Box 27310, Columbus, OH 43227-9987. Phone 614-861-3636.

Silo Guard II

...now for BALED HAY and your SPRING SILAGE!

By chopping grass or baling hay at higher moisture levels, you reduce harvesting losses and produce silage and hay that is greener, leafier and more nutritous. However, by chopping and baling at these higher moisture levels, heating, dry matter losses and reduced feeding values will occur. Silo Guard II reduces these losses by 50%.

Silo Guard II saves 6 to 7% of silage dry matter normally lost in storage. You can't replace or buy 7% more silage for the cost of treating with Silo Guard II. No other product can make this proven claim.

Increase your milk production or weight gain from each ton of Silo Guard II treated silage or hay stored and fed . . . earning you greater profits. The best choice is still Silo Guard II. And now we have a patent to prove it!

Order 4 milk $13.84 for February

ALEXANDIRA, Va. – Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine has announced a February 1985 base milk price of $13.84 per hundredweight and an excess milk price of $12.15. The weighted average February price was $13.77 and the butterfat differential for the month is 16.2 cents.

The base milk price dropped 28 cents from January but was 33 cents higher than last February. The weighted average price was also down 28 cents from January and was 28 cents higher than a year earlier. The price drop from January 1985 was caused by a 20 cent decrease in Class prices as well as a decline in the Class I utilization of producer milk.

The advertising withholding rate, which in deducted from the base and excess milk prices but not the weighted average price, was 10 cents a hundredweight in February 1985 and 14 cents last February. The gross value of February producer milk was $64.1 million, compared to $64.7 million a year ago.

Mr. Shine said that producer receipts totaled 466.7 million pounds during February, an increase of 0.5 percent from last February (after adjustment for the extra day in February 1984). The average daily delivery of 2,470 pounds per producer was up 100 pounds or 4.2 percent from a year earlier, the most significant year to year increase since July 1983.

Class I producer milk totaled 228.7 million pounds and was up 1.6 percent from last February. Class I milk accounted for 49.00 percent of total producer milk receipts during the month, compared with 51.35 percent in January and 48.48 percent last February. Base milk accounted for 90.20 percent of total producer milk receipts in February compared with 89.55 percent last year. The average butterfat test of producer milk was 3.78 percent, a slight increase from February 1984.

Middle Atlantic Order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 194.2 million pounds during February, an increase of almost three percent from a year earlier, after adjustment to eliminate variation due to calendar composition.

Walnut Lane Farm 'gains' on the competition

Cattlewoman April Moll has high-testing Charolais in Pa. Bull Test

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

ORWIGSBURG — The annual Performance Tested Bull Sale is scheduled for March 29, at 12 noon at the Meats Evaluation Center at Penn State. With each of the beef breeds represented and their daily gains charted, breeders will have the opportunity to upgrade their herds with a purchase of one of these performance tested sires at this sale.

Along with the buyers at the sale, will be the anxious breeders who have breed bull after bull until one finally qualified for this testing program and sale.

And among these breeders will be April Moll, R2, Orwigsburg, breeder-owner of the highest testing Charolais bull in the sale. Co-owner of Walnut Lane Farm with her husband Dr. Frank Moll, April has put many years of long hours, and hard work into her Charolais stock. This year she will be seeing the results of her efforts. The quality of her herd is up and her bull, charted at 4.23 pounds-a-day average daily gain, and a ADG ratio of 113 (100 is average) will be a highlight of the Charolais bull selling in the Performance Tested Sale on the 29th of March.

"We're trying to improve the quality of the herd. Up to now it's been mostly numbers," Moll said. Last year the Molls had enough good cows in the herd that they were able to cull the poorer quality animals. "They're not fancy," Moll says about their animals, "but they grow well and they produce well."

It was from her highest indexing cow that Moll selected the bull calf to nominate for Penn State's Bull Test. FAM Ben's Eclipse, sired by Flying M John 97, out of a 1972 daughter of Eleuthers International, one of the few "Hall of Excellence" of the breed, took the trip to Penn State to meet the final selection criteria.

"They must have a certain weaning weight," Moll explains about the selection process for the calves born between January and April 15th. The weaning weight is then adjusted for each nominated calf to 205 days of age. Nominated calves are then trucked to the testing station in September where they are evaluated and graded for conformation immediately.

"If they're not good enough, they send them right back home with you again," Moll explains. Bulls must score at least 12 for conformation. A "12" indicates average muscular conformation and a sound skeletal structure. "All the bulls must also maintain at least a 1.8-pound daily gain from weaning to time of delivery, or a 2.2 lifetime weight per day of age," Moll continues. This ratio plus their conformation grade determines their final admittance into the testing program.

The testing program is based on the fact that feed conversion-weight gain efficiency is inheritable, Moll tells us. Each fall at weaning time, calves are officially weighed, and computerized sheets are sent to each breeder with their herd information on them. Cow indexes are recorded and weights are charted.

With regard to the Charolais breed, Moll adds, "the more I learned about the beef business, the more I thought that they (Charolais) were the profit makers. They're a lean, fast growing animal."

"Let's get one thing clear," Moll states as she explains her farming operation. "I am not the farmer's wife. I am the farmer. Frank is a farmer's husband," she finishes with a smile. Although smiling, Moll is intensely serious about her farm business and has little time for hobbies, malfunctioning equipment, or pesty reporters on beautiful, field-working, sunny days.

"This is easy compared to the way it used to be," says April while driving the tractor to feed her stock.

Her husband Frank is a busy veterinarian with a full-time, large animal practice that takes him throughout Berks and Schuylkill Counties. April Moll commands full responsibility for their 45 head cow herd, 12 yearling heifers, and 300 acres. In addition to feeding out 50 animals a year on their feed lot, she also raises Golden Retrievers and their three daughters, Jennifer, age six, Melissa, age five, and Heather, age four.

"We do alot of farming at night," Moll adds, noting that the field work often requires two people. As adept on a tractor as she is behind her red pickup truck, Moll handles the plowing, planting and harvesting of 100 acres of corn, 20 acres of oats, 20 acres of wheat, and 50 acres of alfalfa on two farms. She also takes care of all the manuring and the repair work needed on their equipment. "I don't get into engines though," she admits.

"We have good neighbors," she adds, pointing out that she also uses some high school kids for labor when available.

The feedlot for the finishing operation is located at the Moll's Walnut Lane Farm. There Moll rebuilt old buildings, added silos and concrete lots accessible for skid loading and efficient for one person. "The most valuable piece of equipment to me is the skid loader," Moll admits.

She feeds corn silage and brewers grains plus a ground corn mix to her animals and combines the feed into a TMR with her skid loader. Mixed alfalfa hay is also fed.

Moll keeps her cow-calf herd and replacement heifers on a farm only a few miles away owned by her parents Mr. and Mrs. Albert Green. Pastureland is utilized year-round and the herd has constant access to a concrete feedlot. There is a drive-along feed lane. "It wasn't always this easy," Moll states as she drives the tractor and wagon along to feed the animals.

"Calving season's a little rough," Moll states about having the cows at another farm. But she appreciates the spacious barn that she and Frank are currently converting into maternity box-stalls.

"Basically we're feedlot — feeding our cows," she says. "The cows milk much better this way," she adds. They are outside year-around and bred to calve March through April. A full night's rest is hard to come by just now, since this is Moll's busy season and a calf usually arrives every night. She keeps close tabs on first-calf heifers and the entire herd is checked nightly.

Although a purchased breeding bull is usually run with the herd, Moll is leaning toward artificial insemination to further improve the herd. Although costs can be very high to obtain the best semen and registration rights for breeding animals, Moll has purchased some better semen privately and looks forward to these calves. Most of the herd is currently homebred and one of her goals is to be able to sell top quality breeding stock regularly.

Brought up on a dairy farm, Moll remembers back to her schooldays when Jersey cows and FFA were the highlights in her life. At a time when many schools did not let girls enter vo-ag and FFA, Moll became a state FFA officer, graduated from Blue Mountain High School and enjoyed showing her Jersey cows. "My very favorite is still the Jersey cow," she confesses.

"My brother wasn't interested in farming," Moll continues. So she helped her father Albert with the mixed dairy herd and field work. Completing a welding course, she also became adept at repair work. Odd jobs were fit into her schedule of school work and milking, and when her father his dairy she milked her animals with a portable milker while attending school.

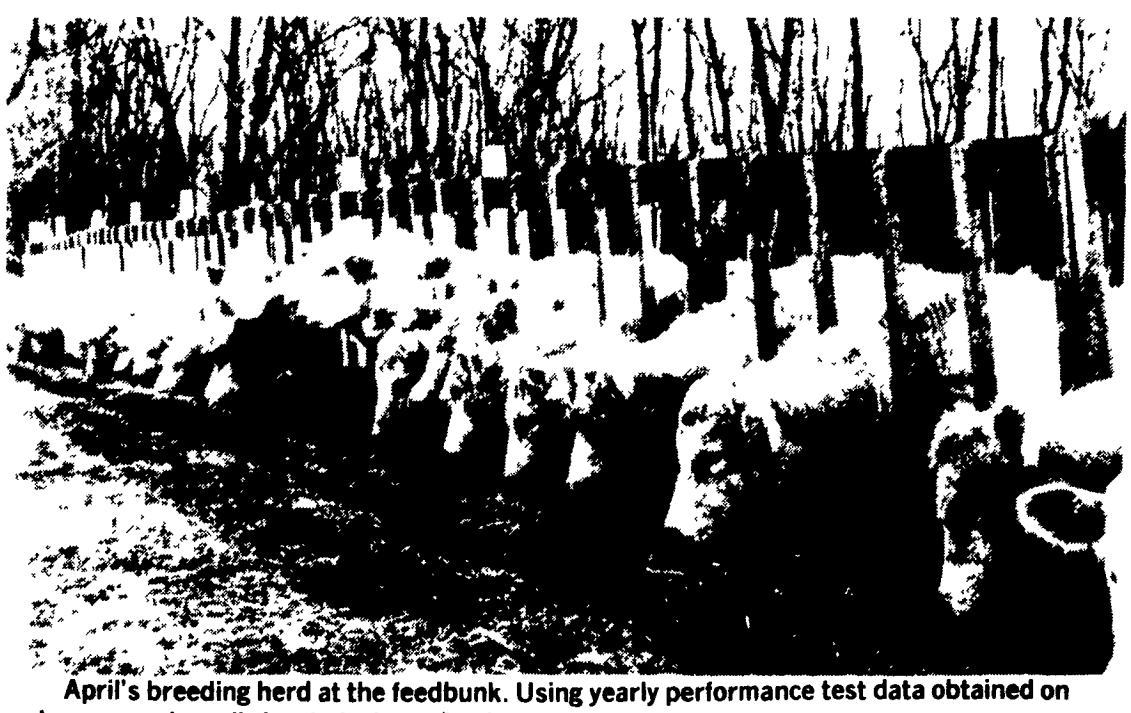
It was in 1970 when April Green was backing her old cattle truck up to the beef unloading ramp at the Farm Show to unload her animals that she met the Charolais breeder that would change her interests. After teasing her about using the beef unloading ramp, Richard Shidemantle of Conneatville, made a deal with her to raise one of his heifers in return for a bull calf.

The two became good friends, and Moll purchased more animals from Shidemantle. She still has the first cow that she bought from him. "She's very productive," Moll states about her first cow.

Four years after high school, Moll started college with aspirations of becoming a vo-ag teacher. But meeting and marrying Dr. Frank Moll, renting more acres to farm on the side, and continuing her beef herd proved to be too much for this farm woman. "I overloaded myself," she admits. "I got to do my student teaching and decided that I couldn't do both, and I really wanted to farm."

Walnut Lane Farm was purchased soon after that and the FAM (Frank and April) Charolais herd was off to a good start. On test for four years now, Moll is still working hard to improve their farm and their Charolais herd. "As the quality improves, I'll show more," she says, adding more to her list of "things to get done". She currently shows at the Keystone International and the Farm Show and would like to spend more time with her animals and her daughter. "The field work I could give up," she admits.

Beef breeders can take advantage of the Performance Tested bulls at the sale on the 29th. Alot of herd work has gone into each of them and their breeding will improve anybody's herd. The sale marks a special achievement for April Moll and if it's a sunny day, better suited to field work, you can bet she'll be there only because it is very important to her.



April's breeding herd at the feedbunk. Using yearly performance test data obtained on her cows, she culls low-indexing animals.

April's first cow is still part of the Walnut Lane Charolais operation.

Baltimore Holstein breeders honor juniors

BY JOHN SCHMIDT
Staff Correspondent

UPPERCO, Md. – The 13th Annual Baltimore County Holstein Association meeting was held recently with a crowd of nearly 100 members and guests. Following a fine family style dinner, outgoing president Wayne Armacost conducted a brief business meeting.

Election of officers was held with a unanimous ballot cast for: president, Steve Wilson; vice-president, Gary Miller; secretary-treasurer, Mabel Wilson; and reporter, Darlene Vansant, all of White Hall, Md. Newly elected directors are Randy Nelson of White Hall, Md., and Carl Welsh, of Randallstown, Md.

All youth members received rope halters from the association for their participation in Holstein events in 1984. Four youths received 4-H awards for outstanding work with Baltimore County 4-H dairy judging, dairy bowl, many local, county and state shows, and first place dairy recordbooks.

Junior winners selected were John Hetchen, of Parkton, Md., and Bucky Ehrhardt of Baldwin, Md. The senior winners included Bill Swift and Stacey VanSant, both of Whitehall, Md. Charles "Bucky" Ehrhardt also exhibited the reserve junior all-Maryland junior yearling and junior calf during 1984.

Maryland Holstein Association secretary-treasurer John Morris discussed recent state activities. A new Maryland Holstein directory will be developed soon. The annual state convention and sale was well-attended and averaged $3801.00 on 45 head. Membership in the state association has reached on all-time high at 959.

The national Holstein convention will celebrate its 100th anniversary this year in Hartford, Conn., and the state Holstein show is scheduled for April 12 and 13 at the Maryland State Fairgrounds in Timonium.

John Morris also introduced Judy Wolford, the new Holstein Association consultant for Maryland, Delaware, northeastern West Virginia and northern Virginia. Wolford immediately complimented the Baltimore County organization and the state of Maryland for ranking ninth in the nation in new registrations and transfers.

"This is quite an accomplishment and means your cattle are being sold effectively," she said.

Morris continued by announcing that Jimmy Hill is the new Maryland Holstein Association president and Joe Schwartzbeck is vice-president. Morris will remain in his current post.

Upcoming events include the annual dairy tour March 20 to Washington County, Md., and the DHIA labs, and the annual Eastern Shore Showcase Sale to be held March 16.

Order 4 milk $14.99

ALEXANDRIA, Va. – Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine has announced a Class I milk price of $14.99 per hundredweight for April 1985. This price is down 19 cents from March but is 15 cents above last April's Class I price. The Class I price has dropped 51 cents from January to April 1985.

Mr. Shine announced a Class II milk price of $12.25 per hundredweight for February 1985 and a butterfat differential of 16.2 cents for the month. The Class II price was down 20 cents from the previous month, while the butterfat differential dropped one-tenth of a cent.

The April Class I price and the February Class II price are based on the February 1985 Minnesota-Wisconsin manufacturing milk price of $12.21 per hundredweight at 3.5 percent butterfat content.

The USDA reported that the wholesale price of Grade A butter at Chicago for February was $1.4125 per pound and the nonfat dry milk price was $.9075 per pound, f.o.b. plants in the Chicago area.

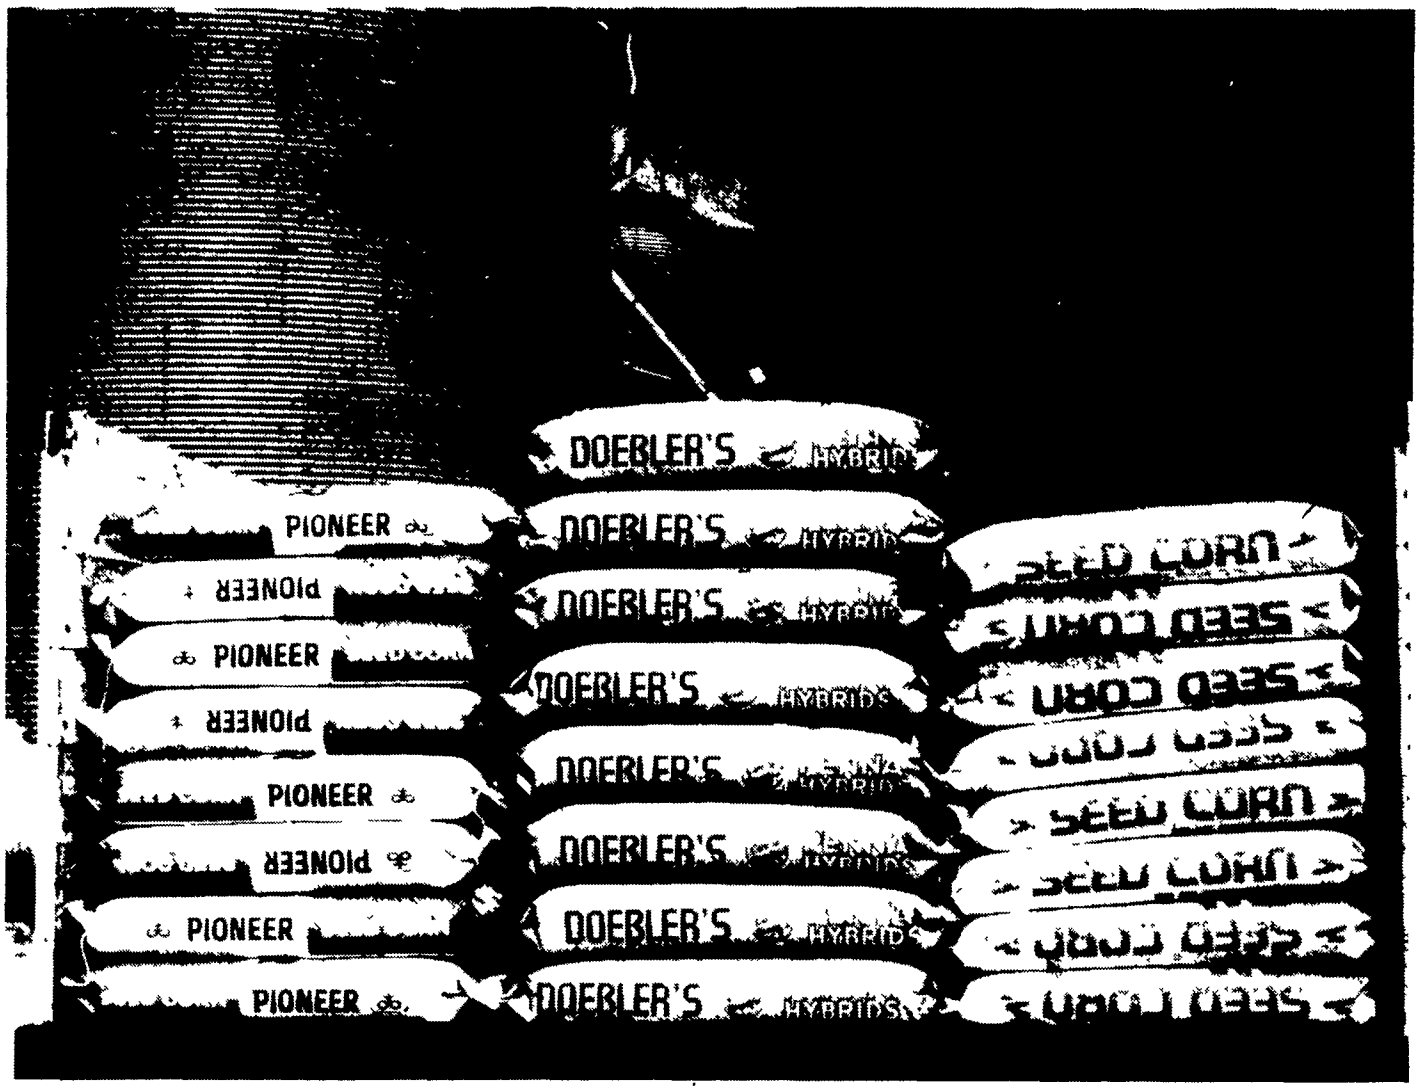
16,000 Eastern Farmers Chose Doebler's, Why?



Could the Answer Be?

A. Doebler's seed corn is bred to be consistently good, year after year, here in the east.

B. Eastern Farmers have planted Doebler's for many years and appreciate the overall performance, seed quality, and the bushel price.

If you haven't tried Doebler's seed corn, why don't you decide to put Doebler's eastern expertise, research, and high quality product to work on your farm.

Present economic conditions mean we all have to be more efficient.

89X-C 120 Days — NEW, NEW!!-SUPER CHOICE!!

The new 89X-C has all the ingredients needed for top yields. Tests over the past three years shows better standup and higher average yields. Resistance to leaf diseases and drought shows marked improvement. Ears are medium long and girthy with very deep kernels set on a hard cob.

78X-A 114 Days — NEW!!-SUPER "A"

The new "A" Version of 78X shows much improved leaf disease resistance which in turn helps standability. Also the "A" retains the big easy husking ear and the ability to make record yields. Very impressive on farms in '83. Responds to thinner planting with bigger ears!! Drought tolerance at a high level.

70X-A 112 Days — VERY HEALTHY-SUPER YIELDER

The new A version of 70X shows improved yields, better plant health and a stiffer stalk. The ear height is also lower. Has a good sized ear of deep yellow kernels, ideal for picking or shelling. Excellent resistance to Northern Leaf Blight. A really super "A" hybrid!!

60X-A 100 Days — POPULAR AND ADAPTED-BRIGHT FUTURE

An improved 60X, this "A" version is shorter in the stalk, stands better and still retains the yielding ability of 60X. Does especially well as an early corn in the longer season areas. Has a good sized ear both in length and girth. Deep kernels for combining. Doebler's most popular 100 day hybrid gaining in popularity by leaps and bounds!!

59X 98 Days — BIG EAR TYPE-RECORD YIELDS

59X has a medium tall plant, is highly resistant to leaf diseases and has a big easy husking ear. Ear size will greatly expand at lower populations. In competition with 36 hybrids, 59X took the top yield in '82 Penn State Commercial Corn Trials (Early Med. Season) with 152.2 bu. dry shelled corn per acre!

48X 90 Days — EXCITING -YIELD CHAMPION

This new hybrid has a medium height stalk, is an excellent stander and is tops in its maturity for yield. In the 1981 Penn State Commercial Corn Trials (early area, 10 locations) 48X was the top yielding hybrid, a full 23 bu better than the test average. In '82, again 48X was not to be outperformed. It yielded 135.4 bu., 18 bu. better than the test average!!

38X 85 Days — HIGH YIELDS-EXCELLENT STANDER

This single is an early version of 48X and fits those who need something earlier. Stalk is stiff and short. Kernels are deep for its maturity. Will stand thick planting and higher applications of fertilizer.

Proof of performance of Doebler's Hybrids is just a matter of record. Those who study the unbiased university corn yield trials know just how outstanding and consistent Doebler's Hybrids really are!! And last but not least, the record shows that farmers plant Doebler's Hybrids in increasing numbers each year.

The state Department of Environmental Resources, (DER) together with the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) and Penn State, take charge of the monitoring phase of the program, checking the impact of BMP's on water quality.

According to ASCS program specialist Richard Pennay, the program was instituted in 1980, when Congress appropriated funds to set up pilot nonpoint source water quality projects throughout the U.S. Although there are 21 RCWP's across the country, Pennsylvania's project is one of only five where in-depth monitoring of water quality is being conducted.

Wednesday's sessions included a tour of the Aaron Stauffer farm north of Ephrata, where monitoring procedures are underway. Five wells, a spring, a precipitation gauge and run-off gauge are currently being monitored to study ground and surface water on the farm.

Constructed in the fall of 1984, the run-off gauge monitors the amount and content of water drained from 25 acres of cultivated land. Data recorded here thus far indicates that the piped terraces on this field have significantly reduced the amount and velocity of run-off, according to USGS hydrologist Pat Lietman.

Like many county farms, the Stauffer operation's high concentration of livestock produces more animal waste than is needed for proper crop fertilization. During Wednesday morning's session, Lancaster Extension director Jay Irwin emphasized the impact of the county's manure production by noting the dramatic increase in animal numbers since 1960. In the last 25 years, laying hens have increased from 3,100,000 to 10 million birds, and dairy cow numbers ballooned from 64,000 in 1960 to 112,000 in 1983. Feeder cattle numbers for the period 1960-83 went from 59,000 to 188,000, and hogs during this same period accounted for the most spectacular livestock population explosion, going from 44,000 to 340,000 animals.

"We are in the right place at the right time to produce food," Irwin explained, pointing out that Lancaster County farmers live within an overnight drive for one-third of the nation's population.

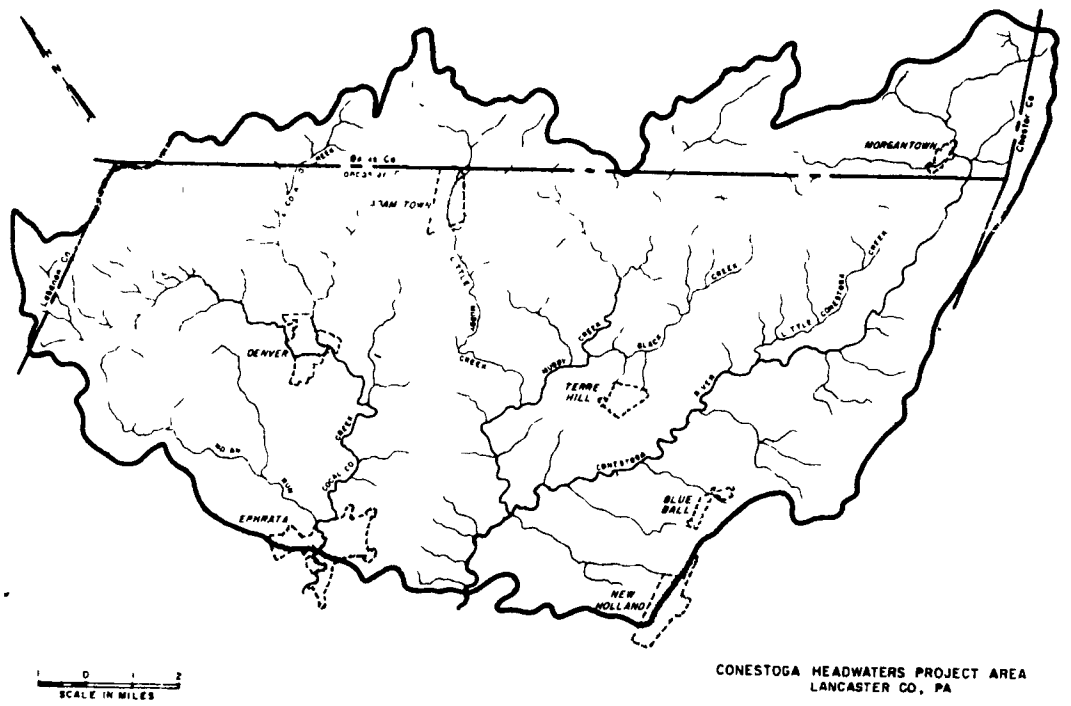
"The situation here is similar to the Chino Valley in California, where the dairies were crowded into small areas because of the expanding population," says EPA research ag engineer Lynn Shuyler, one of the National Coordinating Committeemen visiting the area. Of the nation's 21 project areas, the Conestoga RCWP probably contains the highest population density, says Shuyler. From his knowledge of other RCWP sites, Shuyler feels that this area faces some of the most difficult problems.

Pointing out that no simple answers exist, Shuyler said that manure will have to be moved out of the county if water quality is to be maintained. And the manure will have to be dried before it can be moved, he said. "It may not be economical, but do we really have a choice? Somebody is going to have to make some awful tough decisions," he concluded.

One problem plaguing the project from the standpoint of implementation, according to national committeeman Walt Rittall, SCS water quality program manager, is the area's low level of participation. Of the 99 program applications received since 1981, only about one-half have signed RCWP contracts.

"We've been trying to keep the program flexible to deal with this

(Turn to Page A32)



The Conestoga Headwater RCWP area encompasses 110,000 acres and 1,250 acres along the Lancaster-Berks county border.

Grange 66 meets

Fulton Grange No. 66 held an open meeting and a legislative program on March 11, at the Grange Hall, Oakryn, Lancaster Co. Senator Noah Wenger and 100th District Representative John E. Barley spoke.

Wenger spoke at length on the State budget which should be adopted by June 30th. He noted that the state Constitution calls for a balanced budget and much time and consideration is given to funding each department.

Barley spoke of attending hearings in the Dept. of Agriculture, Game Commission and Penn DOT and their current concerns.

Grange Master, J. Everett Kreider conducted a short business meeting. Plans were made to hold the annual family-style roast turkey supper Saturday, Apr. 13th from 4 to 7:30 p.m. Cost is $5 for adults and $2.50 for children. Mr. and Mrs. J. Everett Kreider invited Grangers to a night of games and fellowship at their home in Mechanic Grove on March 18th, at 6:30 p.m.

Sylvia Buckwalter, a registered nurse and CPR instructor at the Lancaster General Hospital, will demonstrate Coronary Pulminary Resuscitation at the next meeting on March 25. Ray Smith, Pennsylvania State Grange membership regional director, will also speak. The young people will present the program at the April 8th meeting.

The public is invited to a Dutch Maid party for the benefit of Fulton Grange March 28, 7:30 p.m.

Farmers' dream tools could become reality, New Holland researcher says

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — Imagine, for a moment, farming with combines which sense and toss out stones, tightly matted carpets of dry alfalfa, or feed grinders which "remember" a ration you made days ago.

Farming science fiction? Not so, says Jack Crane, director of engineering research and development for Sperry New Holland.

Crane, a featured speaker at the York Ag-Business Seminar on Feb. 28, holds 21 patents for his innovative improvements for various farming equipment. He led the 150 farmers and agbusinessmen attending the conference at the York Fair Banquet Hall on a sort of preview of the tools of "The American Farmers Dream," theme of the session.

Some dreams are already reality, like New Holland's highly successful metal-detecting forage harvester. A magnetic field in the harvester's gathering mechanism senses the presence of metals and shuts down the machine before metal bits contaminate chopped forages or ruin the equipment.

Mower-conditioners may someday lay swaths of hay via V-belt cutters, laser beams or water-jet technology. Researchers are also studying "severe crush" systems, which mash freshly-cut alfalfa into a quarter-inch thick carpets, allowing the hay crop to dry more quickly, while retaining maximum number of leaves.

Other alfalfa research has university scientists extracting leaf juice proteins thru roll presses, then drying the liquid into a white, tasteless powder with 30 to 40 percent protein levels. This high-protein ingredient could be used in boosting the nutritive levels of human diets.

Crane projects that balers will someday be more versatile in the size of the bale package and utilize micro-processers to control hay packing by sensing the moisture content of the material. Operators of large round bale equipment can look forward to the day they can manually wrap one bale, then let microchips remember their initial technique to duplicate the wrap, a real boom for the inexperienced baler operator.

Chemical improvements toward dry hay quality include the use of potassium carbonate, which breaks down the waxy cuticle on alfalfa stems, allowing the crop to dry more rapidly. Preservatives already in use and under study range from anhydrous ammonia to internal spike application in bales of cold flow ammonia, various levels of propionic acid, even live bacteria.

"Lack of sensors," is what Crane calls the major holdback on the implementation of many of the science-fiction improvements, including a combine which will accoustically detect and eject stones, especially useful in soybean harvesting.

In keeping with heated computer competition, Crane noted that Sperry New Holland has taken steps to become the first major equipment dealer to offer both hard and software for agriculture. Their "Ag Command" is a 16-bit machine, with expandable memory and compatibility with IBM and other popular software.

Lancaster poultryman Claude Hess is already using the microchip tools of the "farmer's dream." Developer of the Plain and Fancy Egg farm and a Master Farmer, Hess operates a poultry management company which serves producers of over five million birds from North Carolina to New York.

"Don't be afraid of computers," he admonished the farmer, agbusinessmen audience. A computer-user veteran, he estimates that new users replace up to half their original software as their knowledge and comfort of the machine develops and needs become more exacting and sophisticated.

Hess advises making a list of the tasks a computer would be expected to perform, organized by order of importance. Software should be adaptable to a farm's specific requirements, but the first program generally needed is some sort of financial and accounting package. While "customizing" of commercial software is possible, copyright regulations must be observed.

If no commercial software is specific enough for a farm's particular needs, a custom-written one might be the answer. When Hess took that route in developing his poultry-needs computer package it was a college student computer major who ultimately did the writing, working to Hess's specifications.

Personalities, though, are important. The designer and user of the program must be able to communicate well in hammering out the details and possess plenty of patience in working with the software until all bugs are worked out and it runs as intended.

HOWARD®

PARAPLOW® Model 1810
Loosens Soil Without Surface Disturbance

Impossible? It's true. The new Howard PARAPLOW loosens soil to 14 inches deep without disturbing surface residues. It breaks compaction while leaving trash on top to save topsoil from wind and water erosion. The secret is the PARAPLOW's unique "legs." The Model 1810 has 5 or 6 of them which slice into the ground at a 45° angle to gently lift, fracture and loosen. No other tillage tool works the same way. See your nearby Howard dealer.

Farm records important part of management, financial specialist says

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — Farm records should tell you what has happened, what is currently happening and what might happen in the future, according to financial management specialist Richard Denison.

Denison, manager of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association's farm management service, opened the annual York Agri-Business seminar, Feb. 28 at the York Fair Banquet Center. In keeping with the session's focus on the American Farmer's Dream, Denison spoke on the vital importance of planning and record keeping.

Records of the "dream" must be more than a handful of crinkled checkbooks stubs in a farm office desk. An adequate farm records program, says the financial expert, requires detailed bookkeeping of both the farm's financial end, as well as the production levels and harvest yields of commodities produced.

Records analysis can enhance the use of these records, as specially trained consultants help the farm family decipher, digest and act upon the records information. Professional farm accounting analysts, lenders or attorneys, county agents, suppliers, insurance agents, even nutritionists or crop management specialists, are all consultants who may be able to help plan the needs of a farming program utilizing records information.

Almost as important as solid farming plans is check-up testing, a sort of report card on how the farm commodities are performing. Soil and forage testing, along with DHIA, meat animal evaluations and crop yield checks are proven methods of measuring a farm's productivity and efficiency.

Once a farm family has established a foothold in their business and productivity is climbing, another type planning should come into play - estate planning.

Trained consultants in this highly specialized field are of critical importance since many farm estates involve large inventories taxable land, buildings, equipment and livestock, and often includes several generations or families.

Financial planning needs to cover various forms of insurance needs, according to Walter Jeffers and A. Kim Patrono, associates of the Glatfelter Insurance Group.

In the current tightening economy, with rising insurance rates, Jeffers says that farms and ag business firms are increasingly approaching insurance coverage from a "budget" angle. Available monies are prioritized to the "money making machine" of a farm or firm, obtaining maximum coverage on the part of the business that is absolutely vital to continued income production.

Patrono sees the pendulum of insurance philosophy swinging from disaster coverage, such as fire and natural cause damage coverages, to liability protection. In light of recent trends in awarding lawsuit settlements, a simple $25,000 liability policy, says Patrono, is just not enough.

NATURE REWARDS FARMERS IF THEY DON'T ABUSE IT

- By supplying plenty free nutrients out of the air, saving dollars and making sense.
- By loosening top and subsoil for water and bacteria holding capacity. Especially in drought, our customers crops are bigger than their neighbors in all directions.
- By producing disease and bug resisting crops which makes our customers happy.
- By producing more nutritious crops, higher protein, earlier and more frost resistant.

This saves money on purchases of protein, supplements and vet. bills. The more chemicals you use, the more fertilizer and insecticides you need because you destroyed the natural processes. It is a vicious cycle.

Bugs are sent by God to devour unhealthy plants so that man doesn't eat them. Man doesn't believe in that plan. He kills the bugs and eats the plant and the spray both, and fills the hospitals. If you can't afford fertilizer, use $2.00 worth of Agriserum per acre on the seed which does much good for all the more it costs. It promotes the natural processes and reverses the life destroying trend

We have many outstanding written testimonials of bigger and more nutritious crops, resulting in better livestock health, by using Agriserum seed treatment. It's the best fertilizer dollar spent

Our SOIL TREATMENT and NEMO-FLO loosen hard ground. Several bacteria products save 25% to 50% of your fertilizer bill. Our customers get better crops at less cost, and you can too.

The clear strength advantage of the new Calumet S-3750 spreader tank

You see it first in the "over-built" undercarriage.

We wanted an exceptionally strong 3 750 gallon liquid spreader tank. We got it by using the under carriage from our big 4 500 gallon spreader. We also used the bigger model s 18 x 22 5 16 ply tires on 4 inch spindles and 16 000 lb capacity hub. And like all Calumet tanks the new S 3750 features extra strength flanged heads and continuous finished welding of tank to frame (instead of skip welds)

The S 3750 operates from 540 or 1000 RPM PTO or optional hydraulic motor drive It accepts our 2 or 4 shank soil injectors Four wheel hydraulic brakes are controlled from the tractor cab Liquid level indicator is standard

And the price is right

If you re thinking about a new tank, see the new competitively priced S 3750 at your Calumet distributor Other models offer 2250 3250 4500 and 6500 gallon capacities All are built strong as a Calumet by the strong company in liquid manure equipment

Bucks and Montgomery Co. farmers learn about no-till

BY MARTHA GEHRINGER
Staff Correspondent

NORRISTOWN — To till or not to till, that was the question of the day at the Bucks - Montgomery No-Till Conference.

Farmers from Bucks and Montgomery Counties converged on the Montgomery County 4-H Center March 6 to learn more about no-till. They were treated to a well-organized program with presentations that covered all aspects of no-till.

One of the most interesting portions of the day's program was the No-Till Farmer Panel. This panel was comprised of farmers from both counties who have been using no-till for several years. They spoke of and answered questions on how they have used no-till, their successes and problems.

This panel included Sherm Heebner, a crop farmer from Montgomery County who has been using no-till for three years. Heebner started using no-till to stop erosion and has had much success with the program. The main advantages he experienced were erosion control plus a savings in labor and fuel due to the decreased field time. One of the problems he found was a difficulty in getting fertilizer where and when it was needed. In the future Heebner plans to implement more of a crop rotation to further advance his no-till system.

Wilson Hoffman has been using no-till for seven years on his full season soybeans. This year he had a 48-bushel per acre yield. The main problem he has experienced is proper weed control to ensure high yield.

Kenneth Schultz,a Montgomery County dairy farmer, has been using no-till for six years. He has been using no-till to speed spring planting with his corn after rye rotation. Schultz has experienced a slight reduction in yield which was due to insect damage. This year he plans to use more insecticide to control this problem with his corn after rye rotation.

Rod Wood, also a dairy farmer from Montgomery County, found the timely spraying of herbicides to be a problem. This year his plans include spraying the problem areas more often and at the critical times.

Ed Thaler, a dairy and cash grain farmer, has successfully been using no-till for 13 years. The area he found to be troublesome was manure management. He has solved this by switching to a minimum tillage program on the fields where the manure is spread. He leaves the most erodible ground free from manure and then no-tills them to speed spring planting.

The last member of the panel was Walt Maximuck from Bucks County. He utilizes no-till in his corn and when double cropping soybeans after wheat rye. Fertilizer management has been an area that has proven to be a challenge. Maximuck plans to knife in anhydrous ammonia to combat this and reduce his nitrogen fertilizer bill. The double cropping system has been very beneficial for him. He uses no more herbicides with this no-till system than he would with a conventional tillage system, plus he saves on labor costs.

Also included in the program was a presentation by Larry Hepner, from Delaware Valley College, Doylestown. He explained the no-till program at the college, which has many wet soils. In the spring at Delaware Valley they start with chisel plowing the well-drained and moderately well-drained soils. After these fields are done, they no-till the wet soils and fields in which they are double cropping. No-till allows them to save time, since they can remove a cutting of hay and still plant corn in that field in time for it to mature.

Also the wet soils require a longer time to warm up, thus delaying spring planting. This essentially has the effect of a shortened season. No-till allows them to pick up some time in these fields as opposed to conventional tillage.

Another speaker, Mr. Wayne Lloyd of Ryder Supply, spoke on ridge tillage. The ridges aid in reducing wind and water erosion. Also the ridges warm up earlier in the spring due to their maximum exposure to the sun. This then allows for earlier spring planting. The crop residue which lies between the rows is advantageous since it slows evaporation and aids in weed control.

The subject of no-till alfalfa was covered by John Hauck of the Chevron Chemical Co. Hauck explained the basics of no-till alfalfa, which grows best if seeded in the late summer after a small grain. The soil conditions are similar for both, providing the alfalfa with the opportunity to gain a good footing. Once the alfalfa has germinated, it is treated as any other alfalfa field. Alfalfa has been grown successfully with the no-till method when proper consideration regarding soil condition is taken.

An additional topic covered was feeding the no-till crop with applications of lime and fertilizer. Joe Way from the Montgomery County Extension Service stressed the importance of a soil test. It is the only means of knowing the needs of the field. Without this information, it is very easy to over apply lime and fertilizer. This cuts into the profit of the farm while not necessarily producing higher yields.

The entire program showed that anybody can use no-till in Bucks and Montgomery Counties. The soil programs in the counties support the no-till program with information and personnel to help anyone with any cropping system get started.

The program also pointed out various options with no-till and encouraged farmers to consult with the soil offices to get proper management tips before starting.

The thrust of the day's presentations was that conservation through the use of no-till is the farmer's greatest weapon against environmental problems. It keeps the nutrients on the field for the crop and leaves the land protected through the year with crop residue.

The conference was sponsored by the SCS, ASCS, Extension Service, PA Department of Agriculture, and regional agribusinesses of both Bucks and Montgomery Counties. Farmers requesting more information on starting a no-till program should contact one of these agencies.

"My 120 beat the rest."

Just look at this alfalfa. Leafy...fine-stemmed ...the best alfalfa there is. That's not just the seed dealer in me talking. I got this proof right out of my own fields.

University tests also proved 120 is the best. You just can't get better tonnage than this. Or protein. And my 120 beat the others in fast starts, winterhardiness, longevity and regrowth, too. You need that kind of performance whether you feed it or sell it.

Why not ask your own DEKALB-PFIZER dealer about 120. Then compare it with what you're growing. You'll see how this 120 beats the rest.

hesitancy to sign a contract," says Rittall, who notes that the low participation rate is generally attributed to the conservative nature of the area's Amish and Mennonites who resist such federal handouts as cost-share funds. Nevertheless, notes Rittall, efforts to improve water quality are being made even in the absence of federal funding.

"Indications are that about four-times the amount of work is being accomplished as a result of educational programs, rather than through RCWP funds. So the question arises as to whether or not it makes sense to put cost-share funds into educational programs instead."

Another problem that concerns the national committee, according to Rittall, is the possibility that systems that lessen the impact of large animal numbers on the environment may only encourage farmers to increase livestock numbers to, in effect, take up the slack.

"We've investigated one operation in Utah where we think that herd size actually doubled as a result of improving the (manure handling) system," he says.

But regardless of the conservative tenets of the Conestoga RCWP area's farmers, local coordinating committeeman Robert Anderson, an adult farmer instructor for the Eastern Lancaster County School District, feels that farm income will have to increase before widespread implementation of BMP's will occur.

"It doesn't matter what the percentage (of cost-share funding) is, if farmers can't afford to come up with the balance," Anderson told the assembly of specialists. "I don't see this program taking giant steps forward as long as the economy is the way it is."

In concluding remarks, Anderson urged officials to "go back to Harrisburg or Washington and make farming profitable without support prices. If you can do that, farmers will take care of the rest," he said.

Lancaster Co. Farmers meet goal

LANCASTER — The Lancaster County Farmers' Association has reached a membership of 1193 farm families for 1985 according to president Earl Newcomer, Washington Boro.

"During the campaign, personal contacts were made to farm families in the county," stated Mr. Newcomer. He also added that 107 new family memberships were gained for Lancaster County.

Membership chairman Ginny Ranck, Paradise, will be recognized for the gain along with other counties in the region who made goal. Sixty members helped Mrs. Ranck with membership drive in making personal contacts. A mail campaign is conducted each September for current members.

All members are invited to the annual Spring Banquet on March 22, 1985, at 7:00 p.m., at the Harvest Drive Restaurant, Intercourse. The family-style meal will be capped by our guest speaker, Congressman Bob Walker whose subject will be the 1985 Farm Bill. Reservations must be paid in advance and may be made with Earl G. Martin, Ephrata R. D. 2, Box 512, 17522.

The Farmers' Association is a general farm organization lobbying for legislation for the rural community. It also offers business services to its members through its affiliation with the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association.

your cities and leave our farms and your cities will spring up again as if by magic; but destroy our farms, and the grass will grow in the streets of every city in the country."

Returning to the generosity of the sale participants, Stoesz concluded, "Regardless of how bad we may think we have it here, this day is for those who have it worse."

In addition to the $63,000 raised on Thursday, sale manager Wilmer Kraybill said that several thousand dollars more will be raised this week from slaughter animals sold in the New Holland sales ring.

Donated to the World Relief Sale were many fine dairy animals. Topping the sale was a December ET calf donated by Ben Fisher, Larry Wenger, John Umble and Joseph Lusby, of Paradise. The Fish-Acres Elevation Archie daughter by Glendell Arlinda Chief brought $3150 from the Best Syndicate of Mount Joy.

The Archie dam is scored excellent and has a +741M [illegible] index. Her top record stands at 28,290 pounds milk with 943 pounds fat.

The second and third high selling heifers were Pleasant-Hollow Ideal Bessie and Bendy-Brook Bova Clover.

Donated by John and Orpha Peters, of Manheim, the Bessie heifer left the sale ring at $1500. Due to Bell on March 22, she is by Zeldenrust Ideal Leader.

Following close at $1450 was Bendy-Brook Bova Clover She was donated by Nevin Mast, of Oley, Berks County.

Other top sellers were a Jet Stream daughter, a Sexation daughter from a 23,951 pound dam, a Conductor daughter from an excellent Kingpin, and a Jemini daughter from a 1020F dam.

The sale average on 74 head was $778. Following the sale, manager Wilmer Kraybill expressed his satisfaction with the average and with the sum raised for World Relief.

America — including those that don't come under federal farm proposals.

In other action, Congressional supporters of emergency farm credit legislation passed earlier this month have apparently given up their efforts to override the President's veto.

A number of organizations, including the National Farmers Union and the National Farmers Organization denounced the veto, calling it "outrageous" and "sadistic."

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK – York County's 4-H and FFA'ers are nearly $2,200 richer following the auction of Ratt, and Angus-Chianina cross steer during the annual Ag-Business seminar on Feb. 28.

Scrubbed and brushed to a gleaming hair coat, Ratt was the center of attraction outside the York Fair Banquet Hall as 150 farmers and ag-businessmen gathered for the auction during a break in the day-long seminar.

Auctioneer Blaine Rentzel, coaxed, kidded and cajoled the crowd to bid on 150-pound packages of steaks, roasts and hamburger of the steer, to be delivered wrapped and quick frozen.

Bidding was lively, with Marlyn Flaharty, owner of Service Feed and Supply, Delta, top buyer at $3.40 per pound. Other successful buyers were Spangler and Sprenkle Feeds, York, at $3; York Stone and Supply, $2.70; York Farm Credit, $2.65; and Etters grain producer Geary Huntsberger, $2.50.

Even the tail went on the auction block, selling for $50 to Dover farmer Mike Hoffman. Final tally for the youth fundraiser was $2,187.50.

It was the second bidding parade for York 4-H'er Joe Druck and his Farm Show champion heavyweight. At the January Farm Show sale, York insurance executive Art Glatfelter had paid $2 per pound for the 1,340-pounder, then donated the beef back to the Chamber's Ag-Business committee for fundraising.

In the interim between the two sales, Ratt continued to add finish, weighing in at 1,450 pounds for the Ag-business auction. With that additional growth, carcass yield is anticipated beyond the 750 pounds needed for the five auctioned meat packages. Additional "leftover" meat yield will go on the county's annual 4-H countywide auction slate, to benefit the 4-H Center. That auction gets underway at 7 p.m., Friday, March 15, at the Center.

Mountville couple honored at Inter-State District No. 5 meeting

BY WENDY WEHR

LANCASTER — Nelson and Thelma Hershey, a Mountville area couple, were honored at the recent annual meeting of District #5 of the Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative. The Hersheys received a plaque in recognition of 25 years of membership in the dairy producer co-op.

Presenting the award was district director J. Wade Groff. He commended the couple for their loyal participation in Inter-State, because "membership in the organization is the vital part."

In his comments to the producer-members, Groff also expressed his confidence in the continued existence of the family dairy farm. "There is a tremendous market for dairy products in this country. Someone will be producing milk, so why shouldn't it be us?"

The family dairy farm, he continued, will remain in a viable economic condition because the dairy farmers are not only producing milk but also maintaining a good way of life.

Also speaking at the annual event was James Barnett, manager of member relations at Inter-State. He touched briefly on what's ahead for the dairy economy according to the Reagan administration's proposed dairy program.

With CCC purchases of more than 5 billion pounds milk equivalent this year, dairy producers will see 50 cent cuts in the support price on April 1 and July 1. Reagan's proposal includes two additional 50 cent drops on April 1, 1986 and January 1, 1987, bringing the support price down to $10.60, said Barnett.

"But Congress will have some say," reminded Barnett, "so keep in touch with your representatives."

Nelson and Thelma Hershey, left, accepted congratulations from J. Wade Groff, Inter-State District #5 director, for 25 continuous years of membership in the dairy producer cooperative.

Barnett also briefed the dairy producers on the recommended decision to expand Order 4. Now under consideration is the extension of Order 4 into five additional counties — Berks, Lehigh, Northampton, Carbon, and Schuylkill. Barnett said the extension should "make Order 4 fluid plants a little more competitive with Order 2."

The Inter-State staff member also reminded the dairy farmers of the advertising referendum to be conducted 60 days prior to September 30. "The co-ops will have the privilege to block vote, but every producer must get a ballot and the co-op must inform the producer of how the co-op voted," explained Barnett.

Barnett showed the District #5 members a slide set entitled "Osteoporosis and You" and a presentation on the National Dairy Board.

Kenneth Garber gave the delegate's report from Inter-State's 67th annual meeting. Larry Harnish reviewed what he and his wife Paula learned last year as the Young Cooperator couple.

This year's Young Cooperator couple from District #5 will be Phil and Joyce Shertzer. Wade Groff praised the Young Cooperator program for creating "people who can express themselves for the dairy interest."

Elections were held for the three locals that make up District #5. Elected in the Millersville local were: Wilmer Shertzer, president; Ray Reitz, vice-president; Clayton Charles, secretary-treasurer; Joe Hess and Elvin Hess, delegates; Bob Musser and Glenn Binkley, alternate delegates; Larry Harnish, hauling committee.

In the West Lampeter local, the election results were: Glenn Book, president; James High, vice-president; Kenneth Garber, secretary-treasurer; Nelson Harnish and Moses Beiler, delegates; Ron Leaman and Tom Harnish, alternate delegates.

Elected in the Witmer local were: Harvey Heller, president; Jeffrey Landis, vice-president; John Landis, secretary-treasurer; John Landis and Harvey Heller, delegates; Jeffrey Landis and Mervin Bare, alternate delegates.

Canadian dairyman explains quota system

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — In Canada, the price paid to dairy producers for both fluid and manufacturing milk is set by the government. Fluid milk prices are controlled on the provincial, or state, level, and manufacturing milk, or industrial milk as it is called there, is regulated on the national level. Quotas for production are set for both fluid and industrial milk.

Peter Oosterhoff speaking at the Holstein Forums presented around the state last week, said, "The quota system has stabilized the industry for us." He called quotas "tools used to manage supplies." Oosterhoff is a dairyman and a director on the Ontario Milk Marketing Board Oosterhoff explained that the powers of the Board include setting the price paid to dairymen, collecting fees for promotion and regulating production to the processor. He noted that the Board is the exclusive buyer of milk from producers and the exclusive seller to processors. Milk transporters are under contract to the Board.

He emphasized that the Board exercises no control over the price to consumers, and consequently, milk is often used as a loss leader in supermarkets, giving consumers a bargain.

Historically the problem in the Canadian dairy industry was that producers were not getting paid enough for industrial milk. He called the system established in 1967 "a new and efficient milk marketing system."

The Canadian Dairy Commission was established that year after extensive study. He said its goal was to provide efficient production with the opportunity to give a fair return to the producer and at the same time offer continuity and a fair supply to the processor.

The fluid milk price is set on the provincial level, and Oosterhoff said that the Board generally provides efficient producers with the opportunity for a good income, commensurate with wages paid in industry. He said the Board has been instrumental in maintaining an environment of confidence and security.

The average age of dairy farmers in Ontaria is 42, with an average of 46 cows per herd.

The pricing formula is set on cost of production records of 150 dairymen, with a turnover of 50 new producers annually to give an accurate picture. Data is also used to reflect current economic conditions. Oosterhoff said the formula is set using the 75 percent most efficient producers in the survey, and an average wage of $12.00, based on the industrial wage rate, is used.

The administration of the Board is financed by a checkoff, with 7 cents going for office expenses; 25 1/2 cents for promotion and nutrition education and 1.3 cents for subsidizing the dairy herd improvement organization.

Quotas are based on production before the quotas went into effect, and there is an "overquota levy" for those who overproduce. This levy is so high that it truly acts as a deterrent to overproduction, according to Oosterhoff, with the farmer making just $.53/cwt for the amount of overproduction. Also, if a farmer does not fill 80 percent of his fluid quota he loses it.

Oosterhoff said the Board works to facilitate movement of quotas between producers, although the majority of changes are within families. While quotas may be sold, they may not be leased or loaned, thereby reducing the possibility of absentee owners.

Fluid milk prices are established by dairy producer members of the Milk Marketing Board, but industrial milk prices are set by the Canadian Milk Supply Management Committee. Producers must meet 85 percent of that quota.

There is evidence that consumption of fluid milk is up in Ontario, and the province has the highest per capita consumption of butter. Butter consumption can be attributed to a coloring restriction on margarine, which prevents it from being colored like butter. Margarine must be either white or orange, according to law.

Another success in the Canadian dairy industry was successfully legislating a ban on imitation cheese. He said they realize there is a potential threat from other imitation products, however.

Oosterhoff concluded by saying that they recognize the importance of promotion, adding, "If you don't toot your own horn, no one else will."

Maryland dairyman discusses management

BY SUZANNE KEENE

LANCASTER — Efficiency and good management are more important than size when it comes to operating a successful dairy farm, dairyman Marlin Hoff told farmers attending the Holstein Spring Forum held recently in Lancaster.

"I don't think it's necessary to be large," Hoff said, explaining that he made his greatest return on investment when he was milking 150 cows and cropping 700 acres Today, Hoff has 400 cows on his Coldsprings Farm in New Windsor, Md. But, Hoff pointed out, those 400 cows provide a living for his 13 employees, averaging out to about 31 cows per man.

Good management is an essential ingredient in Hoff's success and he shared some of his management practices with farmers attending the forum Feeding decisions, he said, are an important part of that management system.

Group feeding and complete feeding are essential ingredients for profit, he noted. His bred heifers receive free choice silage and hay.

Hoff spoke out against using milk replacer in a time when there is a milk surplus; he feeds cow's milk to the calves at Coldsprings.

The feed formulations at Coldsprings are done by someone who isn't selling feed. While many feed companies have good nutritionists, the salesman's main concern is still selling feed, he said. By hiring a man with no commercial connections, Hoff believes he is assured of getting the most efficient mixture.

Good management also means making wise breeding decisions. Hoff offered this advice: "The correct way to breed a cow is to breed her to the highest indexed bull possible that will correct her faults " The main thing to consider in breeding decisions is to select a bull that will solve the cow's problems, he stressed.

When selecting a bull, Hoff says he looks for high repeatability. The lower the repeatability, the less confidence he has in the animal. "Numbers are the best tool we've got to use today," he said.

Hoff said he believes it is important to get older cows bred back as soon as possible. On the other hand, he said, he likes to wait about 75 days to breed heavy-milking two-year-olds, adding that he sees no reason to calve them in 11 months.

No-till farming is another tool to help farmers run a more efficient dairy farm, Hoff said. He has been no-tilling his corn since 1972, and has been able to increase his acreage of corn with less erosion.

Providing the proper facilities for the cows is another important factor in managing a dairy farm. Hoff has a free stall barn, but provides box stalls for cows that are flushing. He has 84 calf hutches and milks in double-eight herringbone milking parlor.

Hoff credited his 4-H and on-farm experience as a child for his success today. By participating in 4-H judging contests, Hoff said he became interested in breeding cows.

4-H offers kids the opportunity to travel places where they can see good cows, Hoff continued. And, allowing children to help with farm chores at home is another way for kids to learn about the farm. "Try to get your kids more involved," he urged.

Apply now for local dairy promotion funds

HARRISBURG — State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell has announced that funding is again available to local dairy promotion groups through the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program.

The 18-member Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program Advisory Board has budgeted funds to subsidize local promotion efforts. "We encourage local groups to develop many kinds of promotional activities to encourage as many consumers as possible to 'Make It Milk'," Hallowell said.

"This is the second local funding project made available by the Advisory Board. We received very enthusiastic responses in the first funding period and hope to devote even more funds to local promotions through August," Hallowell said.

Several changes have been made in the guidelines the Board uses in awarding funds. Funds will be awarded to groups wishing to place radio advertising on their local stations when using the board's "Make It Milk" ads. Local groups can insert a special message about their own particular organization or promotion in these professionally produced advertisements. The board will provide a maximum of $450 per radio station if the local organization agrees to pay at least 25 percent of the advertising cost, for a total of $600.

A second change in the guidelines allows partial funding for capital investments such as mobile sales units to market dairy products. For this type of project, the board will provide a maximum of $1,000 per project providing the local group pays at least 75 percent of the cost of the purchase. The board feels these projects can be an excellent way to promote and sell dairy products in the summer months.

"In addition to these new projects, we also encourage other promotions such as shopping mall and supermarket promotions and radio trivia contests," Hallowell said.

The deadline for receiving applications for local funding has been extended to March 30. These projects are being funded under the board's second six-month budget and must be conducted between April 1 and August 31, 1985.

The application form for funding has been changed slightly, requiring less specific information. Applications for funding should include the following information: a description of the project, when and where the project will take place, itemized costs of the project and the amount of funds available from the local groups. Local groups again must report the use of awarded funds and results of the project.

For additional information or applications, contact the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408, or call 717-787-6903.

Cattle sales contracts

proposed buyers 30 days in advance of a sale. If buyers have not obtained credit in advance and received numbers from the bankers, then they would be ineligible to bid on animals which sell on terms, according to Buffington's proposal.

He suggests that the interest rate be made 1.5 percent over prime, and that checks be written to the banks. That way, he said, "There will not have to be waiting around to see who bought and who didn't."

Buffington said honestly that these were not original ideas with him, but ones that are followed, and successfully, by the Arabian horse and the Quarterhorse associations. "Why shouldn't we use the same terms with our valuable registered Holsteins? We have nothing to apologize for and we should collect our money.

"We need to put teeth in our contracts They are written so poorly that buyers know sellers can't collect," he said

Further "teeth" Buffington suggests include having an insurance policy taken out when a cow is sold naming the seller as beneficiary That way the seller will get his money and what's left will go to the buyer He proposes that cows should not be allowed to be re-sold until the seller is paid in full And if the cow becomes uninsurable at any point, the seller must be paid in full

He suggests that no offspring be registered until the terms of the contract are paid in full He said the term which will be most effective is one which states that failure to live up to the terms of the contract will result in notification of the Internal Revenue Service.

"Money is valuable to you — don't get caught in a trap," he cautioned.

Buffington said he is a believer in the 80/20 business principle, which says that what you spend 80 percent of your time doing won't affect your income greatly. What you spend 20 percent of your time doing affects 80 percent of your income. "You must look at your return on investment in human terms. Look at those things that are productive."

He said dairymen should be aware of "what cows do for us on a farm. There has never been a biological product as good as a good cow."

"A meal without cheese is like a kiss without squeeze"

Buffington also told producers that young cows are worth more than preferentially treated old cows. He said a breeder should always like his old cow, but because of her daughters and granddaughters.

He asserted that bull calves from old cows are often over-priced and that bulls from young cows are generally worth more He also questioned the validity of "box-stall records" made when the cow was pampered and given special treatment.

Buffington told breeders to make sure they know a cow's index, calling it an 'estimate of the dam's future genetic transmitting ability Saying it's important to know what you're buying, he added, A cow index is trash if you don't have type to go with it A really good cow will have a deep pedigree and a good index

Buffington also said that herds with low cow indexes cannot catch up because other owners are not going to rest, and will "work like crazy to keep their cows moving up."

In addition to discussing promotion of the breed and individual cows, Buffington challenged the Holstein breeders to promote dairy products. "We produce the best product going in America," he stated.

Using the success of the Florida Citrus Commission as an example, Buffington said he would like to see the slogan, "A meal without cheese is like a kiss without squeeze," become as readily identifiable as "Orange juice isn't just for breakfast anymore."

The Florida Citrus Commission began with 100 producers, Buffington said, adding, "If 100 can do what they did, think what 6500 registered Holstein breeders in Pennsylvania can do." As another example of successful merchandising, he cited the Wendy's fast food chain, and their success in turning the "five-cent" potato that no one would buy into a $1.95 treat that people can't get enough of.

The Penn State College of Agriculture grad also took ag college curriculums to task and said, 'No one should graduate from college without courses in salesmanship, marketing, photography and the other skills that help American agriculture promote its products We must work together in the agriculture industry

Emphasizing that taking good pictures is important to Holstein breeders, Buffington also used slides to show the difference that proper treatment and right time of lactation can make in showing cows to their best advantage

Bradford hosts Agronomy Day

TOWANDA — The Bradford County Annual Agronomy Day takes on a new look, a new experience and a new location this year. The event will take place on March 26th from 9:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Ulster Fire Hall.

New this year will be commercial exhibitors such as Dekalb-Pfizer Genetics, Doblers Hybrids, Pioneer Hi-Bred Int. Inc., Robson Seed Farms, Hoffman Seed Inc., P.L. Rohrer and Bro. Inc., Agway Inc., Bradford County Conservation District, Northeastern Farm Credit Service and more by the time of the event. There will be plenty of time to talk and compare notes with these agricultural product and service exhibitors.

The features speakers this year will be Sid Bosworth, forage specialists; Tom Lanini, weed control specialist; and Doug Beegle soil fertility specialist, all of the Penn State Agronomy Extension Service.

Dr. Bosworth's topics will include the important aspects on forages this year including the use of organic acid preservatives and desiccants as well as the use of Brassicas (turnips, kale, rape, and swedes) for forage. Also the popular topic lately, perenial ryegrass, will be discussed.

Dr. Thomas Lanini will discuss the sometimes elusive problem of controling weeds in hay crops. Timing and correct material for the prevalent problem will be discussed. Hay stands will stay longer with wise weed control.

Dr. Douglas Beegle will be addressing the changes on the "new" soil test report and questionaire. Of course, fertilizing newly established stands and maintaining and older stand will be topics.

Holders of restricted use pesticide licenses will be able to get update certification necessary for renewing expired certificates and for certificates that will expire September 30, 1985.

Five Acre Corn Club awards will be made at this meeting. Reservations can be sent (number and names) to Bradford County Extension, Agronomy Day, P.O. Box 69, Towanda, Pa. 18848, with check for $1.

Weems to speak

DOVER, De. — Ralph Weems, chairman of the board of the American Soybean Association and the first farmer board member of the Chicago Board of Trade, will be the featured speaker at the first annual meeting of the Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association Monday, at the Sheraton Inn in Dover.

All interested soybean producers in the four-state area — Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania — are invited to attend. Registration opens at 2 p.m. with no charge for the general session and exhibits.

HERE IS A "NEW IDEA" IN A WIDE-SPREAD

The "Solids Plus" spreaders from New Idea are named for their ability to shred and spread a wide range of material consistencies. The spread pattern is up to 50 feet wide!

These versatile machines have no chain conveyor to freeze or break down. A positive flow paddle-auger moves material to the high speed beater for accurate, high-capacity spreading.

You must see it operate to appreciate the Solids Plus from New Idea.

National VP of FFA at Elco

BY GLENN B. KNIGHT

EASTERN LEBANON COUNTY – National FFA Vice-President Graham Boyd was the keynote speaker as 180 members, parents and guests of the Eastern Lebanon County FFA Chapter met here for their 23rd Annual Banquet.

Boyd, from Pinetown, N.C., is vice-president for the Eastern Region of the FFA.

During the ceremonies, Bruce Heilinger was named Chapter Star Farmer and Philip Balsbaugh received the Chapter Star Agribusinessman title. Angie Bollinger and Adam Sonnen were named Star Greenhands by the chapter.

Advisor Gerald L. Strickler also announced that 11 chapter members had also achieved academic awards within the school system. They are: Bryan Eberly, Charlie Kline, Glenn Kurtz, Angie Bollinger, Linda Zook, Adam Sonnen, Lisa Gehman, Jeff Balmer, Brian Etzweiler, Donald Prince and Sahron Martin.

ELCO's John B. Kline, who was the 1984 Eastern Region Star Farmer, was recognized by a proclamation from the Pennsylvania House of Representatives which was introduced by Representative Dick Moehlmann.

Three local farm families received recognition for the chapter for having three children each attain the Keystone Farmer Degrees. They are: the Raeu Eberly family, sons Glenn, Brett and Bryan; the Norman G. Kline family, sons Harold, John and Charlie and the Richard Heilinger family, daughters Susan and Patti and son Bruce.

Brian Eberly, Bruce Heilinger and Charlie Kline were recognized for attaining the Keystone Farmer Degrees.

The chapter's Susan L. Heilinger Memorial Award was given to Chapter President Charlie Kline and his mother, Verna M. Kline received the Blue and Gold Award.

DER plans $1.3 million gypsy moth program

HARRISBURG – Department of Environmental Resources Secretary Nicholas DeBenedictis has announced that DER's 1985 gypsy moth program will involve spraying over 200,000 acres in 28 counties at a cost of $1.3 million.

"The results of our field surveys are not surprising," DeBenedictis said. "Gypsy moth populations are rebounding, and we expect defoliation this year to be higher than in 1984. Spraying programs can reduce damage, but we can't eliminate it entirely. Gypsy moth populations are cyclic, and they are beginning the upswing of the current cycle."

For the first time, the spraying program will include newly-infested areas in Clarion, Forest, Venango and Warren counties.

The department will also release four species of gypsy moth parasites – 250,000 insects in all – to help control damage this year.

In addition, DER will spray 30,000 acres of state forest lands in Potter and Tioga counties to combat a developing cankerworm outbreak. Cankerworms and other caterpillars have been largely responsible for killing sugar maple trees on 8,000 acres in Potter County in the last few years.

The gypsy moth spraying program is expected to begin in early May. DER has awarded the following contracts totalling $1,362,192 for the 28-county program:

– $269,150 for Adams, Cumberland, Franklin and York counties.

– $353,436 for Bedford, Fulton and Somerset counties.

– $287,944 for Centre, Clinton, Dauphin, Juniata, Lancaster, Mifflin, Perry, Schuylkill, Snyder and Tioga counties.

– $224,306 for Blair, Cambria, Centre and Huntingdon counties.

– $227,356 for Clarion, Elk, Forest, Jefferson, Potter, Venango and Warren counties.

BY GLENN B. KNIGHT

ATGLEN – Richard Breckbill was the Outstanding Corn Grain Producer in the Octorara Young Farmers Association for 1984.

His award, along with other production awards, was presented at the 16th Annual Awards Dinner of the OYFA in the West Fallowfield Christian School, here.

J. Elvin Ranck won the hay contest, Tim Kauffman was tops in haylage, Melvin Stoltzfus took the high herd award and Duane Hershey's herd was selected as most improved. The High Cow Award went to John Brubaker and Elam Blank was recognized for corn silage.

Octorara High School Principal, Dr. Gary Cooper, noted that the budget for the next school year mandated that some program cuts be made. "But, I am happy to announce," he continued, "that there will be no cuts in our agriculture program."

The association's advisor, Ivan Stauffer, high school vo-ag instructor, announced the award winners, thanked the association membership and invited them to the school for some "hands-on" experience with the school's computer.

In other business, Kenneth Umble was elected president; Duane Hershey, vice-president; Clayton Stoltzfus, secretary; Vernon Umble, treasurer and Bill Stoltzfus, public relations.

Rural economy linked to farms...and vice versa

Farmers aren't the only victims when a farm operation fails. Rural communities also suffer, because farm foreclosures starve local economies dependent on farm income, says a Penn State asistant professor of agricultural economics extension.

"Rural economies are linked with their farming economies," William Gillis says. "If farms close, potential clients of rural trade and service economies are lost. A farm going out of business means fewer customers for a downtown business district. If your're going to sustain a viable rural economy, you need a comprehensive policy that recognizes the linkages between non-farm and farm economies."

Many Midwest and Western communities have especially suffered from farm failures, Gillis states, because agriculture provided the only financial opportunity in the majority of small rural towns.

"Farm policy, international and national market changes, and farm surpluses have reduced farm profitability in many areas," he says. "Farmers then had to draw more on their farm property income–stock dividends, bank interest, rent or whatever source. Non-farm employment opportunities for farm families became scarce. As farm and non-farm sources of income dry up, the area's entire economy suffers."

Pennsylvania, on the other hand, had established a diverse economy, with tourism, manufacturing, trade, and service industries contributing to community coffers. Reductions in farm revenues affect rural economies, but not as much as they affect the economies of their western neighbors.

Pennsylvania's problem, Gillis points out, is in the reduction of off-farm jobs, a major source of income for most of the state's small-operation farmers.

"Farms support local businesses in rural communities, but businesses support small farms as well with their products and services, and more importantly, their off-farm jobs," he says. "Off-farm jobs are critical in times of low farm prices, because they keep farmers going. It's a two-way relationship.

Pennsylvania's rural economy may benefit from subsidies now, Gillis adds, but strategies for the entire rural economy must be considered over the long haul. "It doesn't make sense to worry about one segment of the economy at a time, because the farm and non-farm economy are closely interrelated," he says.

"There isn't likely to be any major social upheaval here, like in the Midwest," he says. "That doesn't mean we don't have a problem. It's an invisible thing. Failing farmers are spread out. It's not like the Midwest, where they're concentrated in one area."

Feed grain signup April 1

Farmers may enroll in the 1985 Feed Grain and Wheat Programs through April 1, 1985, according to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. The April 1 date is a 30-day extension to allow wheat and feed grain producers ample time to make 1985 crop management decisions.

The programs provide incentives to feed grain and wheat producers to reduce production in 1985. Current export and domestic demand is sluggish with resulting low grain prices, the chairman said.

Program benefits to participating producers include eligibility for price support loans, land diversion payments, and price guarantee through the target price concept. To earn the benefits, producers agree to reduce acreages of the commodities being produced and place that acreage in a conservation use in 1985.

Program provisions include the following benefits and requirements

Estimated Price Support Loan Rates	Land Diversion Rate	Est Deficiency Payment Rates	Conservation Acres
Wheat-$3.35/bu.	$ 2.70/bu	$ 1.08/bu	10% of base plus 28.5% of the planted acres
Corn-$2.83/bu.	None	47/bu.	11.11% of the
Sorghum-$2.43/bu-	None	46/bu	planted acres
Barley-$2.09/bu.	None	.44/bu.	11.11% of the
Oats-$1.53/bu.	None	None	planted acres

1985 Crop bases are the average of acres grown in 1983 and 1984 that have been reported to ASCS. In the event that crop acreage was not reported to ASCS in 1983 and 1984, producers should contact the county ASCS office immediately to determine the status of commodity bases.

The economic benefits of the program based on current 1985-86 price projections appear to be advantageous. Fifty percent of the farm projected deficiency payment and 50% of the wheat diversion payment may be paid at the time a producer enrolls in the program. The final deficiency payment rate will be the target price minus the higher of the national average market price for the commodity during the first five months of the marketing year or the national loan rate.

Land designated for conservation use must have been devoted to row crops or small grains in two of the last three years. The land shall be protected from erosion in 1985.

Each farm as listed with ASCS may participate separately. The program is voluntary.

Producers who participate should plan to comply with all provisions. The signed contract is binding after the signup ends. Non-compliance provides for penalties and liquidated damages

USDA Reports

WASHINGTON – Free copies of reports providing background for 1985 farm legislation are still available to the press and public. The reports, published by USDA's Economic Research Service during the past few months, cover the 14 farm program commodities, brief histories of farm programs and farm credit programs, and the consequences of reverting to permanent farm legislation.

The background reports on farm program commodities include Honey, AIB-465; Wool and Mohair, AIB-466; Wheat, AIB-467; Tobacco, AIB-468; Peanuts, AIB-469; Rice, AIB-470; Corn, AIB-471; Soybeans, AIB-472; Oats, AIB-473; Dairy, AIB-474; Sorghum, AIB-475; Cotton, AIB-476; Barley, AIB-477; and Sugar, AIB-478.

Other reports are: Federal Credit Programs for Agriculture, AIB-483; History of Agricultural Price-Support and Adjustment Programs, 1933-84, AIB-485; and Possible Economic Consequences of Reverting to Permanent Legislation or Eliminating Price and Income Supports, AER-526.

Pruning seminar

WEST CHESTER — One of the first spring chores in the backyard is to prune the fruit trees, vines and bushes. But as you attack the fruit plants with your pruners, have you ever wondered if you're doing things right? Even though you may already feel like a butcher, chances are that you are not pruning hard enough.

Many fruits, and apples in particular, require heavy pruning to accomplish the goals of pruning. If you suffer from confusion or guilt while pruning your fruit plantings, then consider coming to a pruning demonstration sponsored by the Chester and Delaware County Extension Services.

On Saturday, March 23, from 10:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. there will be a demonstration on how to prune apples, peaches, pears, and blueberries. The demonstration will take place in the Newtown Square area. Jeff Jabco, Delaware County Agent, and Keith Zanzinger, Chester County Agent will be doing the pruning. Please call the Delaware County office at 565-9070, or the Chester County office at 696-3500 to obtain a map if you are interested in attending.

State legislator says 4-H experience provided confidence and communication skills

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG – It is to 4-H that Jess Stairs gives the credit for his transformation from a shy, country kid to a successful legislator. Named a National 4-H Alumni winner in November, Stairs represents the 59th Legislative District, encompassing parts of Fayette and Westmoreland Counties, in Harrisburg.

"4-H broadened my horizons and helped me gain confidence as a speaker," he said. "It gave me the chance to travel and to meet people."

March 18 to 24 is Pennsylvania 4-H Week, a time to reflect on the program which produces community leaders throughout the state. Most 4-H'ers do not become state legislators, but Stairs' feelings about the benefits of 4-H reflect how many people feel about the organization.

Jess Stairs grew up on a dairy farm in Westmoreland County, the 70-acre farm he presently lives on with his wife and two children. He farmed on his own for about seven years after his father retired, but dispersed his herd of registered Holsteins when he was elected to the state Legislature in 1976.

He says he scaled down his farming operation, and now has sheep and beef, but admits that his greatest pleasure is working outdoors. "I don't play golf; I get my recreation from being a farmer."

Stairs says that he took primarly dairy projects in 4-H, but also tackled sheep, electric and a few others. The activities that meant the most to him were being president of the 4-H Council and being active in other county activities.

Because of his involvement, Stairs got to travel to Penn State to state activities, including Club Congress, Leadership School and 4-H State Days as a member of the dairy judging team. He was a national winner in dairy and traveled to National Club Congress in Chicago, a trip he repeated as an alumni winner.

He feels honored to have been selected as a National Alumni winner, and was pleased to travel to Chicago to accept the award with the other seven winners.

He states, "It was very nice. The other winners were from all over the United States, and it was a privilege to get to know them."

Stairs' current involvement with 4-H is in the role of parent, supporting children. His son, Brian, 11, and daughter, Jennifer, 12, are both active 4-H'ers and his wife, the former Joan MacQuaide, is a leader of the Mountain View 4-H Club in their community. About his children, Stairs says, "They take an active interest. They like the 4-H activities."

Stairs acknowledges that 4-H has changed since he was active, but adds, "The 4-H philosophy hasn't changed."

He points out, "The number of projects has broadened, and the number of surburban and urban as well as rural, non-farm kids, has grown. But the essence and the idea remains the same. It teaches kids responsibility and makes them better citizens," Stairs adds, "They also need to keep in the fun in 4-H. They can't lose that perspective because that's what keeps kids' interest."

"4-H broadened my horizons and helped me gain confidence as a speaker."

He said that learning the skills offered in 4-H is important, but besides the basic skills it is more important to learn to get along with people and to communicate.

Having lived on a dairy farm, he said he knows there was always plenty of work to be done at home, but adds, "It's more important to be able to get away. I got to see what is going on in the world, and I think that helped prepare me for the Legislature."

Stairs notes that he met a lot of people through his state activities and he continues to run into many of them.

Stairs says his venture into politics came about because "I was in the right place at the right time." He explains that in 1973 the local people were looking for a candidate for the school board. Stairs is a Republican in a heavily Democratic area, and was asked to run. He got both nominations, and served for three years on the board, when he was approached about running for the Legislature, challenging the Democratic incumbent.

Stairs says, "I ran, and the only thing I had to offer was hard work. I worked hard, campaigning door to door, thinking I would get an identity so I could run the next time." As it turned out, his hard work paid off, and he won the election. He smiled, "It was nothing I had planned."

In some ways serving on the school board was more difficult that his present job. Stairs recalls, "I was president the last year, and I was fortunate because there was not too much that was controversial."

Stairs is now in his fourth two-year term. He serves on the Education Committee, and having been a part-time teacher and serving on the school board, he feels comfortable with that assignment. He is vice-chairman of the Mines and Energy Committee. He points out that it takes about six terms to gain enough seniority to become chairman of a committee. He also serves on a joint House-Senate committee on conservation.

Stairs said his farm background is a real asset to the challenges he faces in the Legislature. "Any background that gives you a chance to be in business, keep records, and balance checkbooks is helpful. I think I am a fiscal conservative, having been a farmer."

The job of legislator takes Stairs to Harrisburg about three days a week, except when they are in recess. Even then he frequently makes the three hour one-way trip to take care of business. "It is my full-time job, and I spend about 50 to 60 hours a week in the Legislature. I take care of things in my district."

He points out, "It is not a 9 to 5

Researching legislation is one of Stairs' jobs as a state legislator. Here, Stairs consults some of the information available to him in his Harrisburg office. A former 4-H'er, Stairs lives in Acme, Westmoreland County.

State legislator

job. My hours are very irregular, and there are many meetings at night which are just a part of the job. It is much like being a farmer, when a cow decides to have a calf at midnight. You can't always plan your schedule."

Stairs likes to be in touch with his constituents, inviting phone calls and letters. He said, "I get more calls than letters–about 25 to 30 calls a day, with things people are concerned about. I think I have a reputation for helping all the people, regardless of their politics."

Being a Republican from a Democratic district "hasn't been too bad." He claims, "You can be successful if you can identify with the people and be responsive and helpful."

The job is tailor made for Stairs in many respects. He said, "I enjoy being with people and being constantly around people. Yet there is a certain freedom to it and you can set your own schedule."

He added, "Most legislators are conscientious and we try to serve to the best of our ability."

Stairs sees a lot of sadness in his district which is not enjoying the so-called recovery that many places are. He said, "There are a lot of people who need help, and people who want to work but there are no jobs."

St very concerned about saving farmland, although the pressures in his district are not as intense as in some areas. "There are tremendous pressures, and once the land is made into a shopping center, it's gone."

He added, "Farmers will face increased pressure. The price of commodities are not what they should be and costs are always going up. I have a close feeling for the family farm, because it not only provides food and fiber, but it also provides the moral background. If farmers are displaced, the greater loss will be in the moral backgrounds it provides." He added that many of the leaders of our community, state and nation have picked up their sense of values in rural settings.

"We are limited in the state government in protecting the family farm, but I hope we have the foresight to protect this important institution."

He believes Pennsylvania has made some changes for the better since his involvement, adding that when he took office credibility in state government was at an all-time low. "We have done a lot to make government more responsive to the citizens, and we have done a few things to create a better climate for business. We are making progress and I see the day when Pennsylvania will be a growth area again."

One of the frustrations of being in the Legislature, is the inability to get some changes made which you feel are worthwhile, Stairs said. Nevertheless, Stairs is happy to be in a position which allows him to work for his constituents and for the good of all citizens.

Maybe Stairs would have been elected to the Legislature without his 4-H background, but one thing he is sure about - his abilities would not have been developed as well as they are. He credits the development of his leadership and communication skills to his wide and varied 4-H background, a factor in making better citizens throughout the state.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

A chilly morning. Although the sun beams brightly, a countering wind slices through the clear, brisk air like a razor-edged knife, poking under collars, around wrist bands and into hats pulled protectively over the ears.

The kind of day to putter around the house, catching up on this and that. Or to go shopping, since the grocery list has grown while the shelf spaces emptied. So I head for a supermarket at a nearby shopping area, glad to be out in the beautiful day, but secretly satisfied to enjoy it from the inside of the window glass of the family car, heater chugging away.

Then I spot them, working a section of curving strips of corn stubble and dormant hay. Bundled to the teeth in a heavy coveralls, protective boots, closely-fitting caps. Setting up equipment from a fmiliar beige-colored pickup. A hand waves from the field as we recognize each other.

These are our county soil conservation specialists. Now surely, on such a biting-breeze-blessed morning, they could have drummed up some paper work to finish, somewhere in a cozy corner at an office desk. From past personal experience on our own farm, though, we know that's not how they operate.

The National Wildlife Federation has chosen this week to focus on the conservation of our topsoil, one of the nation's most precious resources. Estimates are that only a couple of inches of this productive topsoil stands between civilization and starvation.

Our soil conservationists are part of a relatively small, but ruggedly dedicated corps, fighting on the front lines of the battle to retain and maintain our soils. They march with weapons as sophisticated as computers, aerial and infrared surveys, to the most simple and basic tools as marker flags and a single bottom plow.

With all the talk recently about saving soils, and the focus in this area especially on the Chesapeake Bay and its pollution problems and cleanup budgets, it might be easy to assume that no one has cared in the past.

Not true. Not true at all. These professionals have spent whole careers devising farm conservation battleplans, sighting contour levels, engineering diversion terraces, plotting and laying tile drainage mazes, and designing animal waste systems to retain that recycling material while keeping it on fields and not in streams. Their time, farmers' and landowners' time, and billions of dollars contributed by both sides have been part of agriculture history for many years.

Unsung heroes they are, angered at eight-inch gullies left behind in fields after spring thaw, or whole hillsides of steep slopes plowed to corn, but smiling with satisfaction as they watch cloudburst runoff seep slowly away through a grass waterway or diversion area.

I wave back, and shiver, thinking about how cold it must feel in that wind swept field. Does anyone, I wonder, take time to thank them for abandoning warm offices to stick red flags countour strip edge markers, and to freeze fingers, toes, and ears to benefit ultimately each one of us who drinks water and eats foods.

Thanks, soil conservationists. We couldn't grow nearly as productively without you.

And we hope we never have to try.

Eggs aren't just for breakfast

While eggs are usually considered a breakfast food, they're great anytime at all. They are such a versatile food that they can fit into almost any meal plan.

And there are plenty of good reasons to include eggs in your diet. Egg protein is the most nutritious, readily-available, complete protein known – it is the standard of comparison for other proteins. And, all of the essential amino acids are present in such generous quantities that egg protein may be used to supplement other foods.

Below are recipes for just a few of the many ways eggs can be prepared. Select a few of them and enjoy the nutritious goodness of eggs.

EGG SALAD

2 hard-cooked eggs, minced
1 tablespoon chopped pickles
1 teaspoon chili sauce
6 small olives, stuffed
2 tablespoons mayonnaise

Mix all ingredients together.

Betty Biehl
Mertztown

CREAMED EGGS

¼ cup butter or oleo
¼ cup all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
1/8 teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon minced onion
2 cups milk
6 hard-cooked eggs - shelled and sliced
Toast

Melt butter, blend in flour, seasonings and onion. Cook, stirring until mixture is smooth and bubbly. Stir in milk all at once, heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir until mixture is smooth and thickened. Stir in eggs and heat to serving temperature. Serve on toast.

BAKED MACARONI WITH FETA CHEESE

½ pound mostaccioli macaroni
6 eggs, slightly beaten
½ pound Feta cheese, crumbled
½ pound real butter, softened
2 cups milk

Parboil macaroni in rapidly boiling water for only 6 minutes. Drain. Return to pan; add eggs, cheese and butter. Mix until well blended. Turn into greased 13 x 9-inch pan. Pour milk over top, but do not stir. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for 40 minutes. Let set for 10 minutes before serving.

BANANA GRANOLA OMELETS

1 cup (8 ounces) plain yogurt, divided
2 tablespoons firmly packed brown sugar
1 banana, sliced
4 eggs
2 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon wheat germ, optional
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter, divided
½ cup granola, divided
Granola, optional

Beat together ¾ cup of the yogurt and brown sugar. Stir in sliced banana. Set aside. Mix eggs, remaining yogurt, water, wheat germ, if desired, and salt until blended. For each omelet, heat 1 tablespoon of the butter in 7- to 10-inch omelet pan or skillet over medium-high heat until just hot enough to sizzle a drop of water. Pour in half of the egg mixture (about ½ cup). (Mixture should immediately set at edges.)

With an inverted pancake turner, carefully push cooked portions at edges toward center so uncooked portions can reach hot pan surface, tilting pan and moving cooked portions as necessary. While top is still moist and creamy-looking, fill with half of reserved banana-yogurt mixture and sprinkle with ½ cup of the granola. With pancake turner, fold omelet in half or roll, and invert onto plate with a quick flip of the wrist or slide from pan onto plate. Sprinkle with additional granola, if desired. Keep warm. Repeat for second omelet. Serve immediately. Serves 2.

SPANISH DEVILED EGGS

4 tablespoons chopped onion
12 tablespoons chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
2 8-ounce cans tomatoes (2 cups)
1 teaspoon sugar
Deviled Eggs
½ cup fine bread crumbs
2 teaspoons butter, melted

Cook onion and green pepper in 2 tablespoons butter until tender; blend in flour. Add tomatoes, sugar, dash of salt and pepper. Cook and stir until bubbly. Pour into 4 individual casseroles. Arrange 3 deviled egg halves in each. Combine crumbs and melted butter; sprinkle over. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) for 10 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Deviled Eggs — Halve 6 hard-cooked eggs lengthwise; remove yolks and mash. Blend in 4 tablespoons mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon vinegar, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, dash salt, and pepper. Refill whites.

Many a cook's reputation has been founded on an omelet. It takes a certain knack, but a perfect omelet provides a sense of accomplishment far beyond the work required.

QUICK SOUPER SOUFFLE

Butter
Grated Parmesan cheese
1 10¾-ounce can condensed cream of celery soup, undiluted
½ cup (2 ounces) shredded Cheddar cheese
4 eggs, separated
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
1 7-ounce can tuna or salmon, drained or flaked, optional
Seasoning, optional

Butter bottom and sides of 1½- to 2-quart souffle dish or casserole. Dust with Parmesan cheese. Set aside.

In medium saucepan over medium heat, cook soup with Cheddar cheese, stirring occasionally, until cheese is melted. Set aside.

In large mixing bowl, beat egg whites with cream of tartar at high speed until stiff but not dry, just until whites no longer slip when bowl is tilted. Thoroughly blend egg yolks, tuna and seasoning, if desired, into reserved soup mixture. Gently, but thoroughly, fold yolk mixture into whites. Carefully pour into prepared dish. "Top hat," if desired. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven until puffy, delicately browned and souffle shakes slightly when oven rack is gently moved back and forth, about 35 to 45 minutes. Serve immediately.

DUCHESS POTATOES

3½ cups mashed potatoes (about 6 medium)
⅓ cup butter, softened, divided
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs

In large mixing bowl beat potatoes, ¼ cup butter, salt and pepper at low speed until fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating at medium speed until well blended. Melt remaining butter.

Place potato mixture in large pastry bag with ½-inch star nozzle. Pipe about ¼ cup potatoes onto the edges of casserole or main dish, or spoon potatoes onto greased cookie sheet in neat pyramid shapes. Brush with melted butter.

Bake in preheated 450°F. oven until golden brown, 12 to 15 minutes OR broil 6 inches from heat, 5 to 7 minutes. Carefully remove potato mounds from cookie sheet.

A coating of bread crumbs and sausage makes a hearty snack of hard-cooked eggs. After cooking to a golden turn, they can be eaten hot or cold.

CUSTARD PIE

4 eggs
2½ cups milk
½ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons vanilla
¼ teaspoon salt
1 9-inch pie shell, unbaked
1/8 teaspoon nutmeg

Beat eggs. Blend in milk, sugar, vanilla and salt. Place pie plate with prepared shell on oven rack. Pour egg mixture into shell. Sprinkle with nutmeg.

Bake in preheated 350°F. oven until knife inserted halfway between center and outside edge comes out clean, 40 to 50 minutes. Cool on wire rack. Serve warm or chilled.

Featured Recipe

This week's featured recipe comes from Leti Schadler, Lebanon County Extension home economist. During National Nutrition Month, Letie is encouraging homemakers to combine soup and beans for nutritious, tasty meals.

Preparing stock is one of the most important steps in preparing delicious soup, and Letie shares one of her stock recipes this week. To learn more about soup making, turn to the story about soup and beans in this section.

Cream of (Anything) Soup - Quick Mix

2 cups non-fat dry milk powder
¾ cup corn starch or regular clear-jell
3 tablespoons instant granular chicken bouillon
2 tablespoons instant minced onion
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1¼ teaspoon dry herbs (blend or combination)
¼ teaspoon ground pepper

Combine all ingredients in a dry one-quart container. Stir or shake to mix. Keep covered tightly and store at room temperature. (4 tablespoons of mix will thicken and flavor 1 cup water).

To Make Soup

3 cups water
⅔ cup mix
1 to 2 cups cooked vegetables
2 to 3 slices processed cheese, optional

Blend water and mix together. Bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. Add cooked vegetables. Pour into blender container. Blend to texture desired. You may want to blend this in two batches. Return to saucepan, add cheese if desired and heat to serving temperature. Add meat or fish cubes if desired.

GONE WITH THE WIND?

When leaves crumble and blow away, you're out protein and money.

Beacon Hay Pre-Serv can put an end to leaf shatter. Dryness can cause nutrients to blow away, disappear in the fields or on the wagon. That not only robs cows of the protein they need, it means you have to purchase more protein for your dairy ration.

With economical, easy-to-apply Hay Pre-Serv, you can cut at up to 25% moisture, and get less leaf shatter, more palatable hay, and 10% more of it! You can bale earlier in the day or later in the evening, and even on cloudy days when the hay is well above 18% moisture.

So start using Beacon Hay Pre-Serv and put an end to nutrients and proteins that are gone with the wind. Start saving today... see your Beacon Advisor or Beacon dealer.

ROBBED AGAIN?

Reduce shrinkage and energy loss with Beacon Silage Pre-Serv.*

Beacon Pre-Serv has a consistent formula of organic acids — natural aids to silage conversion — that encourage bacteria already present in the silage to produce excellent low heat fermentation of forages, so you get more hay crop silage for feeding.

University tests of Pre-Serv treated silage stored in a bunker silo achieve: 8.64% more dry matter, 9.3% more energy, and 6.3% more protein.

So don't be robbed of digestible nutrients — be rewarded with more milk from your cows! Use highly effective Beacon Pre-Serv... liquid or dry. It's another way to Bank on Beacon.

Farmhouse Cabbage Slaw

4 cups shredded cabbage
¾ cup seedless raisins
1 apple, unpeeled, chopped
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped onion
¼ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon salad oil
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper

Combine cabbage, raisins, apple, celery and onion in salad bowl. Blend together remaining ingredients. Add to cabbage mixture and toss. Chill 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

ANSWER - Last week we received a bluefish recipe for Lydia Weber of Reynolds. This week, Carol Shaeffer, Wrightsville, shares another bluefish recipe.

Bluefish with Buttery Lemon Sauce

1 cup butter or margarine
¼ cup chopped parsley
⅓ cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon pepper
8 1-pound bluefish (pan-dressed)

Preheat broiler. In 1-quart saucepan over high heat, melt butter or margarine; stir in lemon juice, parsley, lemon peel, salt, sugar, and pepper. Place fish on rack in broiling pan and brush with butter mixture. Broil about 5 minutes, then turn and broil 5 minutes more or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork During cooking, brush bluefish frequently with butter mixture. This can be prepared on outdoor grill over hot coals

SCOTCH EGGS

12 hard-cooked eggs
1 egg, beaten
⅓ cup fine dry bread crumbs
Fat for deep frying

Divide sausage into 12 equal portions (1 ounce each). Shape each portion into patty and wrap completely around 1 hard-cooked egg, pressing edges together to seal. Dip sausage-wrapped eggs in beaten egg, then roll in bread crumbs until completely coated.

Cook eggs in preheated 375°F. deep fat until golden brown and heated through — 7 to 9 minutes. Drain on absorbent paper. Serve hot or cold.

MONTE CRISTO

6 slices bread
2 slices cooked ham
2 slices cooked chicken or turkey
2 slices Swiss or brick cheese
2 eggs
⅓ cup milk
1/8 teaspoon salt
Oil for deep frying
Confectioners' sugar, optional
Strawberry jam, currant jelly or sour cream, optional

On each of two slices bread, place 1 slice each ham and chicken. Top each with second slice bread, 1 slice cheese and remaining bread. Secure each sandwich with 4 wooden picks, trim crusts and cut into halves or quarters.

Beat eggs, milk and salt with fork until blended. Dip sandwiches in egg-milk mixture, turning to coat evenly. Fry in preheated 375°F. deep fat, turning as necessary, until golen brown on all sides, 1 to 2 minutes. Remove with slotted spoon or tongs. Drain on absorbent paper. Remove picks.

Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar, if desired. Serve with strawberry jam, currant jelly or sour cream, if desired.

OMELETS

2 or 3 large eggs
2 to 3 tablespoons water
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of peper

Mix eggs, water and seasonings with a whisk until blended. Heat 1 tablespoon butter in an 8- to 10-inch omelet pan over medium-high heat until butter foams. Pour in egg mixture which should set at edges at once. Using spatula or fork, carefully draw cooked portions toward center and tip and tilt pan so uncooked egg can get to pan surface. Slide pan rapidly back and forth over heat to keep mixture in motion and sliding freely. While top is still moist, fill omelet with ½ cup of filling of your choice. Turn omelet out of pan and onto heated plate.

New 4-H club forming in Elsmere

NEWARK, Del. — A new 4-H club is starting in Elsmere, and now is the time to get in on the ground floor of America's largest youth organization. A community meeting for all interested families will be held on March 13 at 7 p.m. at the Elsmere Town Hall, 11 Poplar Avenue in Elsmere.

4-H is open to boys and girls, age 8-19 and offers a diversity of learning experiences in projects and activities. 4-H members take projects in child care, computers, food and nutrition, clothing, horticulture and much more. In addition, 4-H sponsors a variety of camps, tours, cultural exchanges, fairs and other activities and events designed to enhance the learning experiences which take place in the local 4-H club.

4-H clubs exist in various locations of New Castle County, from Claymont to Smyrna and Newark to New Castle. All programs of the Cooperative Extension Service are open to all persons regardless of race, color, sex, handicap, age or national origin.

For more information about 4-H, call the Newark 4-H office, 039 Townsend Hall (across the street from Chrysler on Rte. 896) at 451-8965 or the Wilmington 4-H office, 1011 Park Place at 571-2498.

Additional information about the Elsmere Club meeting on March 13, call the Elsmere Recreation office at 998-0981.

Extension plans Spring Fashion Fling

NEWARK, Del. — The extension services of Maryland, Delaware and Virginia will present a Fabric Fashion Fling on Thursday, March 21, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Wicomico Youth and Civic Center, Salisbury, Md.

Gayle Jenkins, extension program development specialist in home economics at the University of Maryland, will present "Quilting for Warmth." Other topics to be covered in the day-long program are quilt conservation and storage, window treatments, new developments in manmade fibers, and kitchen design.

There will be a fashion show, and door prizes will be awarded throughout the day.

Shamrock Pie for St. Patrick's Day

Whether or not you believe in leprechauns, elves, fairies, and other such mischievous creatures, you'll find this light, creamy pie to your liking. The ground shamrocks give it a pale green color, perfect for St. Patrick's day. This pie is a light textured dessert (but not necessarily low calorie!) that would also make a delicious dessert for your Easter dinner or any company meal.

Shamrock Pie

- 1 9-10" pixie dust crust, recipe below
- 1 3-ounce package ground shamrock leaves (if these are unavailable in your area, use lime flavor gelatin)
- 1 cup magic water (use dew collected from four-leaf clovers, or substitute tap water if you have to)
- 1 8-ounce package elf cheese substitute cream cheese, if necessary)
- ¼ cup ground Blarney stone (if unavailable, use sugar)
- 1 leprechaun's lemon (one lime will do)
- 1 8-ounce container fairy fluff (or use Whipped Topping, or 1 cup whipping cream, whipped)

1. Heat magic water in a two-cup glass measure for 2½-3 minutes on high, until boiling. Stir in ground shamrock leaves, until dissolved. Set aside.

2. Grate rind of leprechaun's lemon into a small bowl. Heat fruit for 30 seconds on high, then squeeze juice into bowl with rind. (Heating the fruit releases more juice.) Set aside.

3. Place elf cheese in a large glass or plastic mixing bowl, and soften by heating for 1 minute on low (30,3 defrost). Using an electric mixer, beat in ground Blarney stone, then juice and rind from leprechaun's lemon until very smooth and creamy. (Scrape bowl several times during beating so no elf cheese lumps remain.) Beat in shamrock mixture until smooth. Chill in refrigerator for 45-60 minutes, until almost set.

4. When mixture is thick and almost set, beat in fairy fluff until smooth. Turn into pixie dust crust and refrigerate several hours or overnight. Makes a 9-10 inch pie.

Pixie dust crust

- 1½ cups pixie dust (or use graham cracker crumbs)
- ¼ cup ground Blarney stone (again, substitute sugar if you need to)
- ⅓ cup leprechaun's gold (margarine or butter can be substituted, if necessary)

1. Place leprechaun's gold in a 9-10" microsafe pie pan. Heat on high for 45-60 seconds until melted. Stir in pixie dust and ground Blarney stone until well mixed.

2. Press into bottom and sides of pie plate using a flat bottomed bowl or custard cup.

3. Heat crust 2 minutes on high to set. Rotate a quarter turn after 1 minute if your oven heats unevenly. Cool before filling.

Note: The times given above are for microwaves with 600-700 watts of power. For 500-600 W, add 10 seconds to each minute; for 400-500 W, add 20 seconds to each minute.

Did you know that microwave ovens don't really cook your food by magic? Microwaves are attracted to fats, sugars and liquids in foods. When microwaves enter food, they cause the food particles (or molecules) to vibrate very rapidly — millions of times each second — if you can belive it!

This intense vibration causes a lot of friction, and friction causes heat (just rub your hands together briskly!). So the heat which cooks your food in a microwave oven comes from the friction created by the food molecules vibrating. Very simply, your food rubs itself cooked! and that's not magic, or is it?

Beat garden pests with early pesticide applications

NEWARK, Del. — Home gardeners can get ahead of the gardening game with timely pesticide and fertilizer applications, says Delaware State College extension agricultural agent Glenn Layton. Late winter is the time to have soil tested so that gardens can be fertilized and limed before spring planting. It's also the time to apply dormant insect sprays to fruit trees and ornamentals.

In general, vegetable garden fertility levels can be maintained by applying 50 pounds of limestone per 1,000 square feet every three to four years, and by adding two to three pounds of 5-10-10 or 10-10-10 per 100 square feet each spring. Putting on an additional pound of fertilizer per 100-foot row six to eight weeks after planting will also be helpful. Though these practices will usually maintain soil fertility, Layton says it's wise to have garden soil tested periodically.

Another way to get a jump on the growing season is to spray susceptible trees and shrubs for scales, spider mites (not true insects) and mealy bugs. These are among the hardest pests to control as well as the most damaging. "If any of your trees or shrubs have a history of these insects, take steps right now to reduce spring and summer infestations," the agent says. "Dormant oil sprays such as supreme oil or volck, can be applied while plants are still dormant." These sprays work by coating the eggs or bodies of overwintering insects and suffocating them.

Spider mites can't be seen without a hand lens or microscope, but their damage is easy to spot. The leaves on infested plants lose their shine and become yellow or speckled. If uncontrolled, mites will eventally weaken and sometimes kill the plant.

"Most scales don't look like insects at all," Layton says. "The branches on an infested plant have crusted appearance. Up close, the scales look like bumpy little tortoises without legs, heads or tails. Usually the only time you can see legs on a scale insect is when it is newly hatched, and even then they're so small you can't see them without a magnifying glass. At this stage the young are called crawlers." This is when they're most susceptible to insecticides, but the stage lasts only a few hours, which is why dormant sprays are usually preferred.

The eggs of most scale species hatch in May or June, so plants must be watched closely then to make sure the dormant oil treatment was effective. If crawlers are present, a rescue spray with another insecticide may be needed.

Lawns can be fertilized in March and April. Laton recommends using five to 10 pounds of 12-4-8 per 1,000 square feet. Heavier applications are usually made in the fall. Again, a soil test is the only way to know exactly what is needed.

WE RECOMMEND COUNTER® FOR THE BROADEST-SPECTRUM CONTROL YOU CAN GET.

When you plant corn for a living, you can't afford to take chances with your crop. Growers around here know they can come to us for COUNTER® systemic insecticide-nematicide. COUNTER delivers the broadest-spectrum control available. COUNTER protects your crop with outstanding control of rootworms, nematodes, seed corn maggots, seed corn beetles, wireworms, symphylans, white grubs, billbugs and flea beetles And COUNTER delivers cutworm suppression, too. All at one low rate.

Best for Conservation Tillage

If you practice conservation tillage, COUNTER fits your operation. You can apply it banded or in the seed furrow, where it can't blow away or get hung up in crop residues. COUNTER is seed safe, even applied in-furrow. And COUNTER controls on contact and systemically to protect your young crop and get it off to a fast, healthy stand.

Best for First-Year Corn

Rootworms may not be a major problem in your first-year corn, but there's a complex of other pests that attack your crop and can substantially reduce plant vigor, stands and yields. Many farmers around this part of the country are reporting much better stand counts and yields after using COUNTER insecticide on first-year corn.

So if you plant corn for a living, stop by and see us for the best crop protection you can get Come by for all the facts. And see why we recommend COUNTER for the broadest-spectrum control you can get.

Overfishing threatens conch, staple of Caribbean Islands

WASHINGTON – Nearly every Friday night, on the eastern Caribbean island of St.Lucia, hundreds of residents and tourists gather to dance in the streets, drink, and eat conch meat barbecued on skewers.

"Those Friday night fetes are really wiping out the island's queen conch," observes marine biologist Carl J. Berg.

To the north on Bermuda, in the Sargasso Sea, it already may be too late to save the queen conch, Berg says. A survey he made of Bermuda's waters turned up only a few young conchs.

The conch – a large marine snail with a flamboyant pearly pink shell -- is growing scarce throughout its range. The shells that children lift to their ears to "hear the ocean" and tourists carry home to adorn coffee tables and mantles are sold at the estimated rate of a million a year in Florida. Caribbean people have endless purposes for – arranging the shells in neat rows to mark graves, for example. Entire isles have been formed from cast-off shells.

FRITTERS AND CHOWDERS

But conch (pronounced "konk") is most important as a source of nutrition, the "hamburger of the Caribbean." The conch snail is cut from its shell and its muscle meat prepared in dozens of ways – in stews, chowders, fritters, and raw with crackers. Millions of conchs are shipped to the United States to supply Cubans, Haitians, and other Caribbean immigrants.

Overfishing, especially to support a $5-million-a-year export industry, has severely depleted the species.

Berg, of the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass., and his colleague, Katherine Orr, are tying to reverse the tide. They sailed the eastern Caribbean in 1984, gathering hundreds of conch specimens for a study. On each of the 15 islands they visited, they heard virtually the same story, as Berg recalls:

"The old folks would say, 'When I was a kid I could wade out knee-deep to catch dinner for our family. Now we have to take scuba tanks far from shore and dive as deep as 100 feet for conch.'"

A diver for 20 years, Berg often had a hard time finding conchs, especially at Dominica, where fishermen from nearby Guadeloupe and Martinique have helped decimate them. Sand and coral growth often obscured the shells from view.

The islands' fisheries officials unanimously supported Berg's goal: to determine scientifically how to ensure a permanent conch population for all of the islands.

Ignorance ran deep. "Some of the fishermen were collecting the babies and not realizing they were conch," Katherine Orr reports. "They knew nothing about the snail's reproduction; they thought conchs just appeared." Much of the time was spent teaching islanders the facts of conch life.

FLOATS GREAT DISTANCES

The queen conch begins life underwater as one of thousands of eggs in a sac that resembles a sand-covered wad of spaghetti. The egg develops into a "veliger," not much larger than a grain of sand, and begins to float freely, transported perhaps hundreds of miles by the sea's currents. As it floats, the tiny shell on its back grows.

After about three weeks, the conch loses its swimming lobes and settles onto the sandy bottom, where it will remain for 2 1/2 years. At the age of three, it has a full rose-colored shell and also is ready to reproduce. Conchs remain in their shells for mating; the female is fertilized by a far-reaching male organ.

By digging its clawlike foot into the sand, a conch can propel itself forward in a series of short hops to seek food or flee enemies. Conchs are believed to live six years on the average, some of them perhaps twice that.

A goal of the scientists' project is to discover which conch populations are related and how they disperse. To determine feasibility of chemical identification, Berg and Orr collected conch samples from four widely scattered points – Bermuda, Belize, Carriacou, and the Turks and Caicos Islands. Chemical analysis of the samples showed significant genetic variety among the four sites.

Last year they zeroed in on Mexico and the Lesser Antilles Islands in the eastern Caribbean, where conch is an important resource, collecting samples from 19 populations. The samples are being analyzed by University of Colorado Professor Jeffry Mitton to determine the interdependence of conch populations.

DISPERSAL PATTERNS PUZZLE

"Let's say all of St. Lucia's conch float there from Barbados," Berg conjectures. "St. Lucia could kill off all of its conch and still have plenty coming in. The key to its

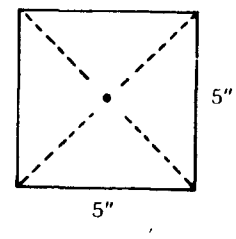
Make a Milk Carton Windmill



by Peter Hamilton Kent

Have you ever wanted to see a windmill in action? You can—if you make this milk carton windmill. You'll need a quart milk carton, construction paper, paint, a drinking straw, a piece of stiff wire about 7" long, and strong glue Cut the top from the milk carton Paint the carton, or cover it with paper. Cut two central slots on opposite sides at the top edge of the carton Glue a piece of straw 1" long in each slot Now make a pinwheel from a piece of construction paper 5" square. Cut along the lines shown in the drawing. Bend and glue every other tip to the center. Push the wire through the center of the pinwheel. For a "gear" cut a paper circle with slots around the edge With the pinwheel in front, slide the wire through the first straw Next, hold the gear inside the carton and poke the wire through its center Slide the wire through the second straw and bend both ends of the wire to hold in place Now watch the wind turn your windmill and the paper gear!

supply would lie miles away on Barbados."

Even patterns within St. Lucia's waters are murky. Berg has advised islanders planning to start a conch fishery on the south end to wait for results of the specimen analysis. If the island's southern conch prove to be the parents of those in the north, a new fishery could destroy all of the islands's breeders.

The decline in conch populations was first noticed more than 10 years ago on Barbados and later at two sites with large fisheries – Belize and the Turks and Caicos. Some islands now restrict conch fishing; it has been illegal in Bermuda since 1978.

To rejuvenate Bermuda's conch population, Berg has recommended moving egg cases in from a downstream site. He also has helped the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States to draw up regulating conch fishing. The regulations – which would bar collection of baby conch – await ratification by the islands' governments.

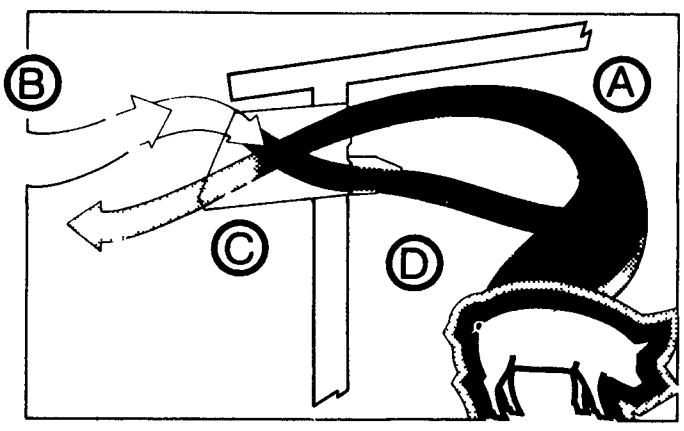
Cut fuel costs as you keep livestock confinement areas warm and dry...

Change the air, but keep the heat.



Ⓐ Exhaust fan pulls warm, moist, foul air into the heat exchanger core.

Ⓓ Fresh air enters the room within 65-70% of the building temperature. Only a 110-volt outlet is needed.

Simplicity is the Del-Air Heat Exchanger difference. Installation is as easy as a normal exhaust fan. Conserving animal heat reduces, or eliminates the cost of supplemental heat. Cleaning takes moments. Automatic defrost prevents freeze-up. Three models available to fit specific confinement needs. Ask us for details soon.

Wayne Co. market hog projects start soon

HONESDALE – The 1985 Wayne County 4-H FFA Market Hog Feeding Project will soon be starting. This project is open to all 4-H members between the ages of 8 and 19 and all FFA members enrolled in an area vocational agriculture program.

This 4-H and FFA project will begin in April when the member takes delivery of two feeder pigs weighing between 40 and 50 pounds a piece. Crossbred feeder pigs make very good market hog projects and are efficient converters of feed to lean, red meat.

Some of the requirements needed for this project include: A sturdy shed or barn with adequate room for two hogs, adequate ventilation during the summer months or a source of shade, a wood or metal trough for feed, a container for water or self-waterer, a source of bedding to keep the hogs clean and dry and a source of high quality hog feed. Young feeder pigs may also need some special care if the weather is cold during April. This might include a source of supplemental heat plus extra bedding.

Once the feeder pigs have adjusted to their facilities the project members' main concern is to feed the hogs with plenty of high quality feed. The average market hog will consume at least 600 pounds of feed in order to reach a market weight of 200 pounds or more. 4-H or FFA Market hogs must weigh at least 165 pounds in order to participate in the Junior Livestock Sale.

The 4-H or FFA member must also be alert for any signs of sickness or unthriftyness.

Growing feeder pigs should be treated for internal and external parasites several times during the feeding periods. Information on materials to use to eliminate these parasites can be obtained by contacting the Wayne County Extension Office.

During the summer months the 4-H or FFA member will have to work at fitting the hogs and also training them to respond to a "show" stick or cane. A 4-H and FFA hog showmanship and fitting meeting will be held in July to help project members learn these important skills.

One of the highlights of this project is exhibiting the market hogs at the Wayne County Fair. The 4-H or FFA member will exhibit both market hogs in the Wayne County Junior Market Hog Show. All of the market hogs are exhibited and judged according to different weight classes. The project members also compete in their own age group for showmanship and fitting honors.

The other highlight for members in this project is at the Junior Livestock Sale. This sale, which is held on Saturday evening of the Wayne County Fair, gives the 4-H members an opportunity to sell their high quality meat animals to interested buyers.

Market hog project members must also keep a record of all expenses in raising the market hogs.

The Wayne County Extension Office is currently accepting orders for 40 to 50 pound feeder pigs to be used as 4-H or FFA market hog projects. The deadline for ordering feeder pigs from the Extension Office is Monday, April 1.

The delivery date for these feeder pigs will be between April 5th and April 15th. 4-H and FFA members ordering feeder pigs will be asked to pay a $50 deposit on each feeder pig that is ordered from the Extension Office. The actual price on each feeder pig will then be determined when they are picked-up and delivered to the member's farm.

The Wayne County Extension Office will also maintain a list of area hog producers that may have feeder pigs for sale in April. Feeder pigs born in January or early February 1985 should make good project animals.

The absolute deadline for start[illegible] 4-H or FFA Market Hog Feeding Pr[illegible] May 1st

If you are interested in th[illegible] or FFA project and would like some additional information, please contact the Wayne County Extension Office by dialing 253-5970, extension 114. You can also receive this information by visiting the Extension Office which is located in the basement of the Wayne County Courthouse.

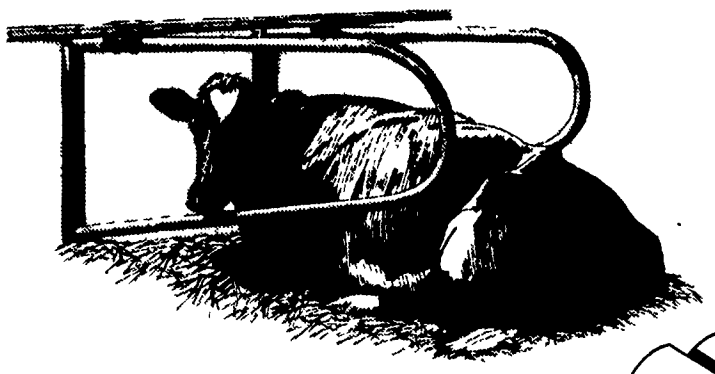
There's one simple reason Hedlund/Martin specifies high-tensile steel tubing for loop stalls.



Sure, we could tell you Hedlund/Martin loop stalls are a snap to clean because there are no floor obstructions. We could tell you about the 55,000 lbs. tensile strength and sturdy 2⅜" OD Allied FloCoat steel tubing. Or how channel ends are U-bolted for extra strength and convenience. Even how you can install Hedlund/Martin loop stalls in minutes.

But the real reason Hedlund/Martin specifies high-tensile, smooth-finish Allied FloCoat tubing is because it stands up to all the abuse your cows can dish out. Which means you won't have to replace it as often as other brands. That saves you time. And it saves you money. It's that simple.

See Hedlund/Martin loop stalls on display at your local Hedlund/Martin dealer, or write for more information. Hedlund/Martin, Inc., 841 Kutztown Road, Myerstown, PA 17067. Telephone 717-933-4151.

Bucks Co. teens attend 4-H leadership day

DOYLESTOWN – Officers from several Bucks County 4-H Clubs attended the Southeast Regional 4-H Teen Council Leadership Day held recently at the Montgomery County 4-H Center in Creamery, Pa.

The Leadership Day was designed to provide in-depth training in parliamentary procedure and officer role responsibilities. Dr. James Diamond, professor of agriculture and Extension education at the Penn State University was the featured speaker.

4-H'ers who attended the training session were: Kathy Hager, Springtown, secretary of the Bucks County 4-H Teen Council; Karen Scarborough, Doylestown, newsreporter of the Bucks County 4-H Teen Council; Ryan Worthington, Doylestown, president of the Unami 4-H Club; Jackie Schmidt, Ferndale, president of the Ottsville 4-H Club; Darlene Buckman, Bedminster, vice president of the Unami 4-H Club; and Joan Comly, Ottsville, Teen Council representative.

Debra Gregory, Bucks County 4-H Extension Agent, served as overall coordinator for the training day which was attended by 26 4-H'ers from five nearby counties.

4-H clubs, which are open to all boys and girls, ages 8-18, teach the young people the values of the democratic process by electing club officers. The club officers work with the adult volunteer 4-H leaders to plan activities and programs for 4-H members.

Alfalfa growers demand the best.

Alfalfa growers expect the most from their alfalfa variety. Like the highest yield, the best quality and multiple pest resistance. That's why more and more growers are planting Cimarron Alfalfa.

Profit with a proven variety. Cimarron is consistently a top producing alfalfa, both on the farm and in university tests – not only in total yield but in crude protein content and TDN. It's an extra leafy/full season variety with excellent stand persistence.

Cimarron offers resistance to a broad spectrum of diseases and insects such as Phytophthora root rot, bacterial wilt, Fusarium wilt, anthracnose, Sclerotinia crown and stem rot, Stemphylium leaf spot, common leaf spot, pea aphids, spotted alfalfa aphids and the alfalfa weevil. No other variety can match Cimarron's combined pest resistance.

High yield...extra leafiness...excellent quality... multiple pest resistance.

Shouldn't you demand Cimarron?

York County seeks 4-H alumni

YORK — "If you are a 4-H alumni from Anywhere, USA, we are looking for you! You are special and we want to include you on our "Very Important People" list," says Roxanne Price, Extension 4-H Agent, York County.

The York County 4-H program would like to give you, a 4-H alum, an opportunity to give something back to the youth program that did so much for you, says Price. Alumni are a resource for 4-H volunteers as project leaders, motivational speakers, resource people on special topics and financial support, as well as other opportunities.

Price says that 4-H alumni can be included in the program immediately or "kept on file" for the right moment.

To become a "VIP" contact Roxanne Price, Extension 4-H agent, at Penn State Cooperative Extension Service, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York, Pa., 17402 or phone 757-9657.

For the avid gardener

Color and More Color

When spring turns many heads and hearts to outdoor planting, it's easy to forget the wide range of beautiful flowering plants for use indoors which are in great abundance, no matter what the season, a feast for the eyes of gardeners and non-gardeners alike.

On the list you could include African violets, kalanchoes, hibiscus, streptocarpus, crossandra, exacum and gerbera.

The fact is, there's now more variety of flowering plants available in more places than ever before. You may have your favorite shopping place, whether it's a super market or other mass market outlet, plant store, garden center or nursery.

Most popular of all are African violets, teased, tamed and tidied up since they were discovered growing on a forest floor in eastern Africa many years ago. Now they come in many radiant colors – pinks, whites, blues, lavenders and bi-colors – and many different flower forms from frilled and fluted petals to severely single, many-petalled doubles and semi-doubles. But, best of all, they hold their flowers in great profusion, high above the foliage for a glorious display, all at one time. And unlike many other flowering plants, these exuberant varieties flower continuously with a colorful bouquet.

Or witness the growing popularity of the kalanchoe, once a Christmas only kind of plant in red, red, red. Now plant breeders have build in a myriad of shades, including pinks from soft to shocking, oranges from burnt to bright, yellows from lemon to sunny. Some of these are bright, others are subtle, but all are beautiful, with lasting quality which gives weeks of enjoyment. And now, they're available all year.

The tropical hibiscus has now been tamed to the pot so you can find these florid beauties in full bud and bloom. Crossandra, with its bright firecracker orange flowers and glossy deep green foliage, is widely available.

Hybrid lilies of many hues, temporarily tamed to the pot, can now be found year round. They deliver a bonus, for once planted in the garden, as with other lilies, they will deliver up their beautiful flowers, year after year.

Exacum, or Persian violet, with twinkling blue or white flowers, offers a delightful scent as a bonus. There are now double-flowered blue exacums, too.

Streptocarpus, the strap-leaved relatives of African violets, have similar flower colors, but because of larger blooms, different markings and shapes, they are even more spectacular than their cousins. New miniature forms coming to market now are equally lovely.

'Happipot' gerbera is not only a good outdoor plant for summer and fall, it's a lovely pot plant for a short lease on a sunny windowsill. The large daisy flowers in brightly colored shades make good short-stemed cut flowers, too.

Combine soup and beans for a nutritious meal

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LEBANON — The month of March is National Nutrition Month and offers a chance to plan menus that offer good food and nutrition. There are still many blustery days in March which are perfect for hot soup, and, when coupled with beans, soup provides a delicious, and nutritious meal.

Lebanon County Extension Home Economist Letie Schadler calls soup the first "soul food," as well as the first "convenience Food." At a workshop this week she told homemakers that soup was popular in colonial days because of the lack of refrigeration. As long as those early homemakers kept the soup simmering on the fireplace, it would keep for a long time with no spoilage.

While soup takes time to make, Letie noted, it is also fun and offers great satisfaction. Since it is easy to freeze, it becomes a convenience food.

The basis for a really tasty soup, according to Letie, is good stock. Stock has been made over the ages from "leftover parts" of animals - those which need long cooking but which offer good flavor. Once stock is made, it can be frozen or pressure canned and used for a soup base later. Although it is hard to find "decent bones at the supermarket, Letie said that many butchers are willing to supply good bones cheaply. She noted that stock can be made from cooked bones or raw bones, but the two should not be mixed. Raw bones should be cooked very long and very slowly.

To get maximum flavor, Letie suggests browning them first, something she does by roasting them in a blue enamel pan. She said the brown bits in the pan are important to flavor the stock. After browning, the bones should be covered in cold water, not drowned in it. The fat will rise to the surface as the liquid cools, and can be removed before making the soup.

Vegetables should be added to the bones in the pot, even those which are "over the hill" in the refrigerator, such as celery leaves and limp carrots. These foods can be put through the food processor, and all the flavoring will go into the stock. The pot's lid should be cracked as the stock is cooking. Letie suggests skimming off the scum from the raw bones for the first 1/2 hour of cooking time.

The pressure cooker can also be used for making stock, cutting the cooking time considerably. A pressure cooker will extract the maximum in flavor and nutrients in bones in 45 minutes to one hour.

In addition to beef bones, ham hocks and chicken necks and backs are good bases for stock. Letie said most of the fat should be left on the chicken bones, and it can be removed after the stock has cooled. Parsnips, turnips and cabbage are good additions to soup stock, she said.

If you want the stock to taste richer you can add wine, she added. She said tawney port is good with beef and dry white wine is nice with chicken. Bouillon is also a nice addition, but she pointed out that bouillon adds not only flavor but a high amount of sodium.

A perfect complement for many soups is beans, and they are good in the diet because they are complex carbohydrates, which offer a lot of nutrients in relation to calories. They also have a high amount of proteins and vitamins and very little fat. Legumes should be used with a grain to make a complete protein; therefore, it is good to serve beans with wheat, corn rice or barley.

Letie points out that it is important to wash beans, and to sort them, looking for any stones or other unwanted foreign matter. She noted that lentils and split peas are convenience beans because they don't need to be soaked before using.

There's nothing quite as satisfying as soup. Here Lebanon County Extension Home Economist Letie Schadler ladles out some hot, hearty soup for tasting.

All other beans need to be soaked, and can be covered with water and left overnight or can be soaked in the quick-soak method. The quick-soak method calls for covering the beans with water and bringing the water to a boil. Boil the beans for two minutes and then cover and allow to stand for one hour.

She cautioned against adding salt to beans when soaking because they already have a high sodium content. To avoid the sodium, beans can be washed repeatedly. The soaking water should always be discarded and not used in the cooking process.

Letie said that one cup beans will complement 2 2/3 cups rice; 1/4 cup soybeans complement 2 1/2 cup rice and 1/2 cup beans complement one cup cornmeal or six tortillas. Adding milk and cheese to a meal in which beans are served also helps to complete the protein.

Letie reminded homemakers that bean soup thickens as it cools, and she said there really is something to the idea that soup tastes better the next day. "When the ingredients cool together, and are reheated, there is blending of flavors. So, for maximum flavor, soup should always be made the day before."

She also cautioned that soup must be cooled properly so that it doesn't spoil. She said large batches should be set in ice water and stirred to cool down quickly. When it is on the stove for long periods it must be simmering, or it can also spoil.

To get started on making soups for your family, try the following stock recipe:

Brown Stock

Cut in pieces and brown in a 350¼F. oven: 6 pounds shin and marrow bones. Place them in a large stock pot with:

4 quarts water
8 black peppercorns
6 whole cloves
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon thyme
3 sprigs parsley
1 large diced carrot
3 diced stalks celery
1 cup drained canned or fresh tomatoes
1 medium diced onion
1 small, white, diced turnip

Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, uncovered for 2 1/2 to 3 hours or until reduced by half. Strain stock. Cool uncovered and refrigerate.

Doing chores yourself can help stretch budget

MEDIA — The grocery bill seems to climb every time you shop, the car needs the winter tires taken off, and the house is in need of a good paint job. Household expenses seem to be growing, but you just can't seem to find the money to do everything.

Today with rising prices and shrinking incomes, many families are turning to household production to ease the costs of maintaining their homes, says Extension home economist Greta C. Vairo. Household procuction is simply using your time, talents and skills instead of money to "do it yourself."

Many jobs around the house can be done by the family instead of hiring them out. Painting the inside or outside of the house, doing small plumbing or electrical repairs, shampooing carpets and rugs, repairing screens and insulating by caulking, weatherstripping or insulating in the attic are all jobs that can be done by family members themselves to save money.

Learning to work on your car yourself can also save money. By washing and cleaning the car, pumping the gas, changing the oil, lubricating the car, changing or rotating tires, you can save the high cost of garages that do the same thing for you.

Instead of hiring someone to do it for you, do your own yard work. Cut the grass, weed, trim trees and shrubs, shovel snow yourself and save money.

Families can also garden and raise their own food to save on grocery bills.

Conrad Weiser FFA'ers receive awards

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

ROBESONIA — "The future of agriculture is going to be in the hands of those that are academically able. We encourage scholarship." These were the remarks of the Conrad Weiser FFA Advisor, Stephen Miller, as he, along with his co-advisor, Donald McNutt, presented many awards to their FFA students last Thursday evening at Conrad Weiser High School..

He was justifiably proud of his group. At the annual parent-member banquet, awards were presented to those excelling in leadership, scholarship, and participation. "It's very impressive to see what they're doing," observed Harold Stern, high school principal as he spoke of the many activities and accomplishments of the Conrad Weiser FFA members.

The Star Greenhand award was presented to Rebecca Ann Sonnen. Testing her judging skills, Rebecca Sonnen participated in the Keystone Livestock and Meats judging contest in Harrisburg, the Junior All-American Dairy Judging Contest, and placed second at the area contest in the Dairy Foods Contest.

She is a member of the 4-H dairy club, serves as secretary of the club and shows her dairy cattle at local fairs and district shows. Participating in the state band, Sonnen is also a member of the ninth grade chorus and is an honor roll member. Sonnen's student supervised occupational experience program (SOE) projects include three dairy heifers.

Brian Zechman was chosen as the Chapter Star Farmer. Zechman's many activities include serving on the Pumpkin Contest Committee attending the state and national FFA conventions, judging in the state livestock judging contests, and serving as chapter chaplain and parliamentarian. His SOE projects include breeding and market swine, and employment on a dairy farm.

Star Chapter Agribusinessman is David Musser. His SOE projects include sugar snap pea and sweet corn enterprises and a carpentry construction work experience program. He has been active in the national chapter rating glass and aluminum recycling, trout nursery, pumpkin contest, banquet committee, and vegetable and seed sale committees.

The Dekalb Award went to the retiring vice president of the chapter, Jonathan Sonnen. This outstanding senior served as treasurer, vice president, and president of his dairy club, and as sentinel, parliamentarian, and vice president in his FFA chapter. He attended the state and national FFA conventions and attended the county and state leadership training conferences.

The star award winners of Conrad Weiser FFA include: Brian Zechman, Rebecca Sonnen, Jonathan Sonnen, and David Musser.

Serving on many chapter committees, Sonnen has SOE projects that include six enterprises: eight acres of corn, ten acres of oats, 20 acres of barley, 40 acres of wheat, and five acres of alfalfa.

The Chapter officers conducted the Honorary Degree Ceremony. Honorary membership is given to those who have contributed time and effort to the FFA for a number of years. Honorary membership was given to: Irvin & Grace Musser, Elaine Shartle, and Eileen Kulp.

The advisors, Miller and McNutt, presented trophies to Duane Schoemaker for placing gold in the state FFA Conservation Public Speaking Contest. Jonathan Sonnen received a trophy for placing gold in the state land judging contest.

Henry Noss received the American Farmer Degree, the highest degree a FFA member may attain. The Chapter honored him with a special plaque for his accomplishment.

Jonathan Sonnen was presented a state farmer pin and chain for being a Keystone Farmer recipient this January. Mr. Roland Feeg was recognized for being awarded the State Honorary Keystone Farmer Degree in Harrisburg at the FFA Mid-Winter Convention.

FFA Proficiency awards for outstanding student supervised occupational experience programs (SOE) were presented to members by Mr. Franklin Troutman, president of the Conrad Weiser FFA Alumni Association. A committee of FFA Alumni members judged student applications and made the following selections:

Agricultural Mechanics-David Musser; Diversified Crop Production-Johnthan Sonnen; Placement in Agriculture Production-David Swope, Brian Zechman, Steve Pieller; Beef Production-Tim Klopp; Poultry Production-Randy Cox; Sheep Production-Duane Schoemaker; Swine Production-Brian Zechman; Vegetable Production-Troy Small; Wildlife Management-Duane Schoemaker, David Musser, Heath Edwards, Daryl Schaffer.

Todd Fies, state FFA chaplain and Lynn Ketterer, dairy production major at Penn State University, were the guest speakers for the evening.

As she spoke on "America's pride," Ketterer closed the awards banquet with "the future of agriculture lies in education."

4-H Horse Expo

The Berks County 4-H Horse Clubs, Horse Council and Cooperative Extension Service will hold their 1985 4-H Horse Expo on March 20 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Berks County 4-H Center.

The Expo will feature exhibits and displays by commercial businesses, breed associations and 4-H clubs. There will also be speakers throughout the day discussing various subjects, including equine dentistry, the American sport horse, artificial insemination and gaming horses.

There will also be an opportunity for anyone interested in horses to learn more and have a good time as well. There will also be an amateur art contest for all ages. It will feature "the horse" and prizes will be awarded.

The expo is free and open to the public.

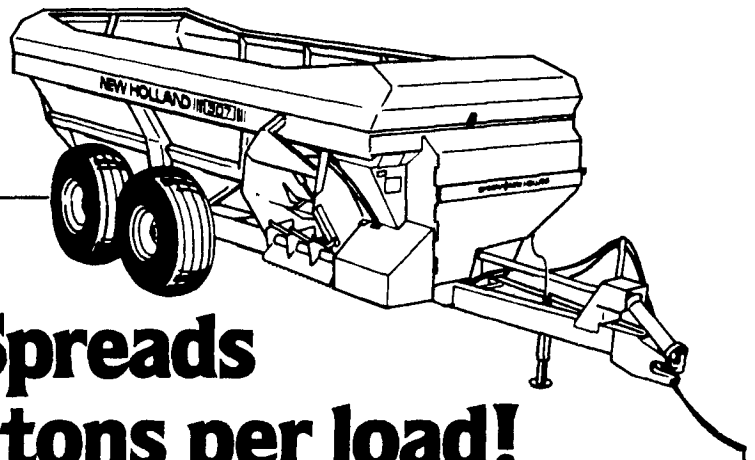
Cut fast, avoid damage

The Sperry New Holland Model 489 Haybine® mower-conditioner makes a nine-foot cut, fast. The rolls on the "489" are in the main frame, not in the header. So the header is light, to glide over rocks and obstructions with less chance of damage. Stop in and see one today.



Spreads 10 tons per load!

The Model 307 is a giant, ten-ton capacity slurry spreader from Sperry New Holland. It spreads a fine top dressing of manure — fast! You get an aggressive spring-loaded auger to move material to the front right side for easy, consistent spreading. The auger floats over rocks and foreign matter, reducing the chance of damage. And, the "307" is backed by our excellent service and parts program. See one today!

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

My trip to Hawaii was a definite change from my work routine at home. But, because we were almost constantly on the move, I wouldn't call it a vacation. In fact, we were required to get up earlier than we usually do at home. Most mornings we were up by 5 a.m.

When we visited Pearl Harbor, which is about five mile northwest of Honolulu, we arrived at 7:30 a.m. only to find hundreds of people already in line. About 5,000 people visit each day. After touring their museum and viewing a film of the bombing on Dec. 7, 1941 by the Japanese, we took a boat, manned by an all girl crew, out to the U.S.S. Arizona Memorial. Oil slicks from the sunken ship can still be seen and the names of the 1,177 men who lost their lives were inscribed on an end wall. It was a moving experience.

After a bus tour of the city and the Punchbowl Memorial Cemetery, we spent a little time sun bathing and swimming near Waikiki Beach.

In the evening we attended a Polynesian Revue. The exotic dancers were dressed in colorful native costumes and the drums and musical instruments were loud. Afterward, we had a buffet meal and shopped in the International Market. Here hundreds of shops are crowded into a rain forest atmosphere swarming with tourists. Shopping seemed to be the favorite pastime of many people on our tour and this was a good place to spend money as the fascinating shops carried exquisite jewelry, handmade island crafts and the comfortable muumuus and aloha shirts.

The flights from one island to another took only about 20 minutes. When we landed on the valley isle of Maui, we took a bus to a tropical plantation where a tram carried us through fields of coffee, avacados, guavo and macadamia nut trees. The rainfall varies from almost 400 inches on the mountain tops to only five inches along the beaches. Several times we saw snow on their 14,000 feet mountains which are of volcanic origin.

As I'd enjoyed the coconut syrup on my pancakes in the morning, I bought a small jug to take home to my husband and I also ordered a case of fresh pineapples to be shipped to the Philadelphia Airport.

4-H is a family organization

EDENSBURG – Did you know that 4-H is a family affair? Even though 4-H members are young people between the ages of 8 and 19, 4-H can involve the whole family. Parents can become 4-H leaders and help children learn in 4-H.

Meetings are often held at night so everyone can attend, parents and younger brothers and sisters, too.

Now 4-H has a program called "Strengthen Your Family," designed to bring families closer together through better communication and more family activities. Across the state, families have participated in events such as a 4-H "Y" Day, where the local YMCA opened its facilities to all 4-H families. 4-H Clubs are starting Adopt-A-Grandparent projects so they get acquainted with older people. Major 4-H events are scheduled so 4-H members can bring their families. Elderly citizens are helping 4-H members as 4-H project leaders and are also adopting 4-H'ers as nieces, nephews and grandchildren.

4-H offers "Family Time" as part of this program. The learn-at-home series helps to strengthen families through activities they can do together. Both parents and children who have participated in this program have said "Family Time" provided them with an endless amount of fun things to do and helped them to set their priorities as a family. Parents said they became more aware of their children's abilities and gave them more opportunity to express themselves.

Disabled farmers face physical, psychological barriers

BY JOHN STOKES SCHMIDT
Staff Correspondent

SALISBURY, Md. — Eight and a half million disabled Americans live more than 20 miles from the nearest large town or city, and some of these disabled rural citizens are farmers.

But while many disabled farmers want to stay in farming, they find many physical, psychological, and financial barriers facing them.

To bring together rural families with physically and mentally disabled members, the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service organized the Mid-Atlantic Workshop for Disabled Individuals and Their Families in Rural and Agricultural Communities, a first of its kind program in this area.

The two-day event, held recently at the Youth and Civic Center in Salisbury, drew university safety specialists, agricultural engineers, communication specialists, psychologists, rehabilitation counselors, home economists and resource professionals from many organizations.

This army of specialists came with the desire to present the most recent information on successful modifications of equipment and facilities for use by farmers, watermen and others with disabilities. Their program was designed to help disabled individuals identify resources that will help them live independently.

Through meeting with handicapped farmers the specialists hoped to gain a greater ability to help disabled farmers continue farming.

The first day's sessions were aimed at introducing the disabled person's problems and society's attitudes toward the handicapped. Dr. William Field, an Extension agricultural engineer and a national spokesman for the disabled, addressed the workshop about problems facing handicapped farmers. Access and mobility for everyday jobs are problems unique to the disabled, he said.

Ernest Lareau, Maryland State Department of Education, vocational rehabilitation division, discussed special problems facing handicapped watermen. They, too, are faced with mobility problems such as getting to their boats and using special equipment for crabs and oysters. Both speakers emphasized that these real and unique problems require extra skills, motivation and creativity on the part of both the disabled and his family.

A stress management panel discussion followed, with panel members stressing that family and friends must offer extra support for a disabled person. They noted that a recently disabled person, in most cases, has lost at least some of his former independence and suffers additional worry and tension about his new emotional or physical limitations.

The level of frustration increases for the handicapped person and his family alike, creating a need for ways to relieve stress.

Panel members included Mrs. Edward Haas, farm wife; Dr. Agnes Hatfield, child study specialist, University of Maryland; and Stanley Stocker, counseling psychologist, Veterans Administration. Dr. William Scales, who is disabled himself, acted as moderator.

The second day of workshops focused on equipment modifications that can reduce or eliminate some problems the disabled experience. Dr. William Field explained that several companies and many disabled farmers have combined efforts to design functional, safe lifts to transfer a handicapped person from wheelchair to tractor seat. One-handed attachments for hydraulic couplings and automatic hitching devices are also being developed.

The ability to operate equipment has important physical and psychological benefits for the handicapped farmer. "Operating machinery in the fields reduces pressure sores, creates a better mental disposition and mental health," Field said.

However, operating equipment has its hazards as well as its benefits. For example in the case of a combine fire, a disabled farmer needs an average of six to eight minutes to get out. Self-extinguishing systems are being developed to combat this problem.

Another hazard is isolation. Field recommends that a CB or FM radio be installed in all equipment operated by handicapped persons. "Make it as risk-free as possible to continue farming," he stressed. Thorough maintenance and pre-operation checks should take place to reduce the chance of breakdown, he continued.

"It only takes three percent of the average equipment cost to make it accessible to the disabled farmer," Field noted. "You can improve feeling of worth and self-esteem and create actual physical therapy by making it possible for a farmer to use his equipment again.

The IH 186 Hydro is the most converted tractor, with lifts and hand controls. Dr. Field noted that Don Skinner, a well-known disabled farmer from Illinois, has converted much of his International equipment for his use by utilizing inexpensive parts from other machinery.

Changes in the home can also make life easier for the handicapped person. Extension home economist Dr. Judith Williamson talked about how the kitchen can be modified to meet the needs of the disabled cook.

All switches and controls should be located on base cabinets and low enough for easy access, she suggested. A front-loading dishwasher should also be included, along with sinks no deeper than five inches with inserted racks.

Williamson also recommended installing a mirror over the range to see the back burners. A down draft vent system should be used with this system.

Front burners or a staggered positioning to eliminate the need to reach across a hot unit is also a good idea. Lazy susans, side-hinged doors on ovens and portable appliances can all make things easier to organize for efficient food preparation, she said.

Waterman David Barnes and Dorchester County Vocational Rehabilitation Counselor Russel Miles discussed boat modifications that can allow a handicapped person to harvest crabs and oysters. A boom for getting into the boat and synch for hauling in crab pots are two such adaptations.

Dr. John Wells and Howard Fletcher, Computer and Information Systems, University of Maryland, explained how computers can help the disabled. Telecommunications are linking computers together using telephone lines, offering many present and future applications, they explained.

The Extension Service telecommunicator goes through many county Extension offices in Maryland. Available information from this service includes market and weather reports and 4-H news. With the use of a home computer there will be a limitless supply of information available to the computer uses, they stressed.

Many company and organization exhibits were on display during the workshop for the benefit of the disabled.

Easter Traditions

Almost daily I've been making a routine check of the various flower beds around the house. Pushing their way up through the pile of leftover leaves from last year are my dwarf iris, daffodils, tulips, and crocus. It was bitter cold on the day that I nestled the bulbs into the ground for their long winter nap, wondering all the while if they would actually become spring flowers from the semmingly lifeless bulbs.

The bright green sprouts symbolize that spring is indeed on the way. This year it seemed to me like I just put the Christmas decorations away in time to get out the Easter eggs and daffodil flower arrangements. However, spring can be just as full with fun family tradition as the Christmas holiday has been. How many spring traditions do you celebrate in your family?

One favorite family tradition of ours (or more correctly my mother's) involved yard work. My mother insisted that the Easter bunny did not come to dirty lawns. Therefore, the entire yard and flower beds had to be raked and spruced up by Easter day to ensure the arrival of the bunny. I must say, this tradition continued long after the identity of the Easter bunny was revealed. Another tradition is to have the peas and onions planted by St. Patick's Day. A new dress for Easter, and a family picutre taken outside was another spring family tradition.

If you are looking for some new family traditions to brighten your spring, here are a few ideas to get you started:

- Pack a picnic basket and have a sunrise picnic breakfast.
- Dress up the family dinner table with fresh cut flowers.
- Decorate Easter eggs together as a family. Check in the library or current magazines for new ways to decorate eggs.
- Make a calendar of historical events that happened prior to Easter. You can use the idea of an Advent calendar for the basic concept.
- Create an Easter egg tree. Insert a sturdy twig into a flower pot of sand and hang your decorated eggs on it.
- Take family walks and look for all the signs of spring.
- Line a basket and plant real grass seed in it to have a real bed of grass for displaying your decorated eggs.
- Try new recipes of traditional Easter foods from other countries.
- After the egg hunt, crack the decorated shells of the eggs and glue them into a colorful mosaic picture.
- Have a family time to share poetry and short stories of spring.

Hopefully these ideas will get your family started on your own set of rich traditions to celebrate the coming of spring. Starting new traditions with your family will probably be as refreshing as the first crocus bloom.

Most youngsters can weather parents' divorce

NEWARK, Del. — Children usually are distressed at news of their parents' separation, but are they likely to be emotionally scarred by divorce? Probably not, if the emotional climate of the home is basically healthy and supportive, says Delaware State College extension home economist Deborah Walker. Research shows most youngsters do not suffer long-term or persisting psychological difficulties as the result of a divorce.

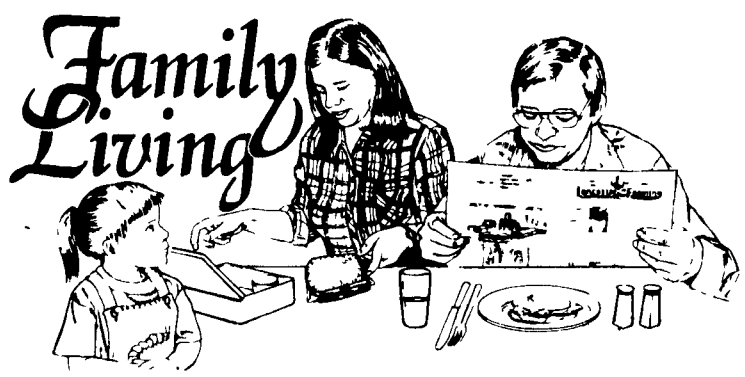
"Tears, tension and withdrawal are typical signs of a distress," says Walker. "Some children, particularly adolescents, take the news in stride. Those who have been treated badly by a parent may be happy to get away. Children are resilient and can survice most family crises if some attention is paid to their needs."

Researchers have found more psychological disturbances, school problems and psychosomatic illnesses among children living in unhappy, stressful, unbroken homes than in youngsters who live in single parent homes, Walker reports. "It's the emotional climate of the home, not the family structure, that contributes to a child's sense of well being," she says.

The quality of the attention given a young child during the separation process is extremely important. If the custodial parent is competent and caring, the child may adjust well; if the custodial parent is too involved in his or her own problems and neglects the needs of the child, the child will suffer.

"In many studies, preadolescent children seem to be helped by the presence of brothers and/or sisters, and by good peer relationships," the extension agent says. "The crucial factor in an adolescent's response to divorce is the resiliency established before the parents' separation. For children of all ages, continued contact with the non-custodial parent is important."

In other words, children who have a lot of support inside and outside the family (caring parents, close friends, good emotional development and success in school) tend to go through the divorce experience relatively unscarred. Less fortunate ones may have more difficulty.



Montgomery County 4-H Center moves from chicken coop to modern facility

Staff Correspondent

NORRISTOWN — Can you imagine operating a 4-H center out of a remodeled, two-story commercial chicken house? This is exactly what Montgomery County did for 17 years, and with much success before growth of the 4-H program and urban sprawl forced them to search for a new and more suitable location. They found this location in the former Skippack Elementary School, in Creamery. This school has been transformed to accommodate the new 4-H center, plus various ag agencies.

This new center is the result of much planning and hard work. To fully understand what the new 4-H center means to Montgomery County, 4-H, and the agricultural community, travel back to 1966 when the first Montgomery County 4-H was purchased and remodeled. It served 4-H very well, hosting approximately 600 meetings and events annually. Such events as 4-H fairs, chicken barbeques, dog and horse shows, and even wedding receptions have utilized the grounds and buildings.

But, in recent years some of the limitations of the center became more and more obvious. More meeting space was needed, show and exhibit grounds needed enlargement, and urbanization seemed only an arm's length away. A less obvious limitation was the ever increasing burden of maintaining and heating a building with decreasing revenues.

The Farm, Home, and 4-H Foundation of Montgomery County was organized in February 1984. The sole purpose of the Foundation was to provide facilities and program support for over 3,200 4-H members in the county. In early 1984 the Skippack Elementary School became available and the wheels of progress were set in motion.

Hatfield Packing Company, understanding the need that existed, pledged a generous gift of $300,000 to launch the formation of a "4-H Center." An additional $100,000 came from the Montgomery County Commissioners toward remodeling the main building. The total budget needs of the project was estimated at $950,000.

Looking toward the future and wishing to develop a sound financial base, the foundation invited several regional and county agricultural agencies to enter the center as rent paying units. This would also aid in creating an ag center for Montgomery County that would benefit 4-H, farm, home and the ag community.

Currently the agencies operating at the Center include the County's Penn State Cooperative Extension Service, the Southeastern Pennsylvania regional office of the state Department of Agriculture, the USDA Soil Conservation Service, USDA Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, and the Farm Credit office.

Locating these offices in one building and the building's proximity to the county's geographic center, all contribute to making these agencies more accessible to the general agricultural community. Now farmers can visit several agencies with one visit. The union of these agencies creates a feeling similar to that behind the Foundation - a feeling of everyone working together toward one goal, the benefit of 4-H and agriculture.

The climax of all this work was the dedication and open house of the Montgomery County 4-H Center on Dec. 10, 1984. Although it was the climax, the work at the center is far from finished, a fact that is well illustrated by the president of the Foundation, Merrill K. Zimmerman.

He continues to work on fundraising and various other projects that need his attention. At the dedication, Zimmerman was singled out for special praise. Vice President Fred L. Seipt said, "Lesser men would have been discouraged from undertaking such a task and would have given up. But Merrill Zimmerman never wavered and worked harder than anyone else leading the campaign that has provided the center."

Future plans for completion of the center include outdoor landscaping, completion of meeting rooms, and procurement of adjacent land. Plans for this additional land include rings for horse and large animal shows, and activities that require level areas; an indoor arena for winter activities of large animals, rabbit and dog shows, and 4-H fair exhibits; barns for housing show animals, demonstration of animals, sheep shearing schools, hoof trimming; an athletic field for community use including little league baseball and other recreational activities, and a wooded area for day camping and nature study for children ages 6-12. The additional land will also allow for expansion of the annual 4-H fair.

The Foundation is still searching for $400,000 from businesses and individuals to reach the original goal and accomplish many of the plans.

The Montgomery County 4-H has grown considerably since 1966 when the center in Lansdale opened its doors. Today over 100 county clubs have 4-H'ers from every age and background participating. The Montgomery County 4-H Center is following in a proud tradition.

Ashley Jones of Schwenksville presented a "piece of the rock" to Merrill Zimmerman, chairman of the Montgomery County Farm, Home & 4-H Foundation, for his dedication to the construction of the new 4-H Center in Creamery. Also recognized for their outstanding efforts were from left, Fred Seipt of Lansdale, County Agent Joseph Way and Walton Hackman of Hatfield.

Oxford 4-H'er raises Libby to lead the way

BY SUZANNE KEENE

OXFORD — She chews up nylon stockings, nibbles on the wooden furniture, and wears the carpet thin with her rambunctious antics. She can consume great quantities of puppy chow and recently infested the house with fleas.

But despite her normal — and occasionally unruly — puppy behavior, Libby, an eight-month-old purebred German shepherd, has won the affection of her temporary owner, Ted Cregger. Ted, a member of the Puppies with a Purpose 4-H Club in Lancaster, and his family are seeing Libby through the first stage of her training as a Seeing Eye dog.

Libby will be spending her first year of life at the Cregger's home in Oxford, where she will become accustomed to the daily activities of a busy household. Libby goes most places the family visits. She travels to the grocery store, the train station, the dentist's office, to church and shopping malls — places through which she may one day safely guide a blind person.

Ted first learned of the Seeing Eye program when Lancaster Extension 4-H Agent Zoann Parker visited Ted's 4-H club, the Kirkwood Community Club, to explain the Seeing Eye project and distribute a book that tells the Seeing Eye story. Ted's interest was sparked immediately because his mother, Ruthie, has been blind since birth.

Ted said he told Zoann about his mother and she encouraged him to participate in the program. But while his mother's blindness affected his decision, it was not the only factor. "I like dogs and I wanted to try it for 4-H experience," Ted explained. He has been a 4-H'er for five years and has completed cooking projects.

On Sept. 7 two representatives from Seeing Eye Inc. in Morristown, N.J. delivered tiny, furry, eight-week-old Libby. They also left Ted with a Seeing Eye manual and told him about the monthly Seeing Eye club meetings at the Farm and Home Center.

For the first several nights Ted slept on the floor right next to Libby so he would be sure to hear her if she cried. "I woke up and she had her head on my pillow," Ted says with good-humored indignation.

At first Libby slept on a bath mat which the Creggers gave her as instructed by the Seeing Eye representatives. And although Libby has grown considerably since that time, she has yet to outgrow her psychological need for the mat, which she carries around like a security blanket.

Although Libby is much like any other pet, she has more to learn than the average pooch. Ted works with her daily, teaching her the basic commands of sit, stay, forward and halt.

She also has to learn not to be distracted by other things — especially other dogs, Ruthie explained. To train Libby to ignore the presence of other dogs, Ted, Ruthie, and Ted's grandmother, Lucretia, work with her and the family's two pet dogs in the backyard. Ruthie and Lucretia each hold a dog in their arms while Ted leads Libby around them in figure eights, reprimanding Libby each time she allows her attention to stray to the other dogs.

Libby must also become accustomed to a wide variety of situations. To accomplish this, Ted takes Libby almost everywhere he goes. And with him he carries a paper bag stocked with a bottle of Fantastic, some paper towels and a plastic bag, to take care of "emergencies."

Libby has been to the shopping mall, to church, to a restaurant, the grocery store, the bus station, and the drug store. And, if Ted gets his way, she will even go to school later in the year.

Although most businesses are happy to accommodate Libby, some turn her away, Ted reports.

"These are student dogs. If they don't get the experience of going in stores and restaurants, it's going to be hard on the person who gets them," Ruthie adds.

But while "student dogs" can be turned away, working Seeing Eye dogs can go anywhere, Ted explained. A blind person with such a dog carries an identification card that informs businesses that it is against the law not to admit the animal.

Ruthie has never had a Seeing Eye dog, but her boyfriend, who is also blind, has had a golden retriever guide dog for three and a half years. When out of the harness, the dog is like any other pet, but "as soon as that harness goes on, he's working," Ruthie said.

For now, Ruthie says she doesn't really need a dog, but she might need one in the future, she adds.

Libby gets an additional workout at the 4-H club's monthly meetings. Ted, who is president of the club, said there are currently nine or ten dogs in the group. Some of the members come to the meetings from surrounding counties because there are no Seeing Eye dog clubs near them.

Ted spends about 15 minutes a day on training, and about the same amount grooming Libby's two thick coats. German shepherds, Ted explained, have two coats of heavy hair that make them especially suited to cold climates. So when Libby gets too hot inside, she rests on the cool cement of the back step.

The Seeing Eye takes care of most of Libby's expenses, including food and veterinarian bills. Every three months the Creggers receive a $54 check from Seeing Eye for food. The veterinarian bills are sent directly to the organization.

When Libby is about a year old, she will return to the Seeing Eye, where she will receive three months of training. If she does well and passes all the tests, she will be placed with a blind person and will start a new life with a new owner.

While Ted is a little reluctant to give Libby up and says he wouldn't be too upset if she failed and came back to live with him, he adds, "I also want her to help people."

Ted spends about 15 minutes a day grooming Libby's thick coat.

Libby gives Ted an affectionate greeting. The two are nearly inseparable, going almost everywhere together.

Winning Berks dairy teams honored

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

VIRGINVILLE — Berks County honored and praised its winners and leaders last week at the annual Berks County 4-H Dairy Banquet. The awards presentations featured the state's first place dairy judging team, and the county's dairy bowl team, which placed second in state competition.

Pennsylvania's top dairy judging team, which went on to place second nationally, includes William Lesher, Todd Miller, Charles Seidel, and James Younker. Their coaches were Carl Brown, Jerry Crone, and Christine Williams.

Slides were shown of the team's trip to Louisville, Ky., last November, where they competed nationally.

Each team member was presented with a plaque, and a larger plaque will be displayed permanently in the Berks County Ag Center.

Pennsylvania's second place dairy bowl team included: Sandy Moser, Debbie Price, Clark Sattazahn, and Naomi Herbert.

Berks County Dairy Princess, Debbie Price, and the National Jersey Queen, Carol Dreisbach, also presented awards to the county project book, blue form, and officer's book winners for the year. They include:

Project books: Jason Balthaser, Western Berks; Scott Youse, Eastern Berks; Kirk Sattazahn, Stouchsburg; Michelle Christman, Northern Berks; Harold Dietrich, Northern Berks; Debbie Price, Eastern Berks.

Blue form Winners: Lisa Krick, Virginville; Kirk Sattazahn, Stouchsburg; Tammy Balthaser, Western Berks; Lynn Krick, Virginville; Charles Seidel, Virginville; Debbie Price, Eastern.

Officer's Books Winners: Secretary-Henry Seidel, Virginville; Treasurer-Stacey Meyers, Eastern. Each trophy was sponsored by a Berks County agribusiness and they were recognized at the presentation.

The support of the leaders, parents, and agribusinesses of the Berks County 4-H was praised by Extension agent Christina States as she introduced the county's 4-H society.

The well-attended awards night was concluded with an enthusiastic Berks County 4-H Wheel of Fortune game and many door prizes.

Earning first place in the state and second place nationally, the Berks dairy judging team included: William Lesher, Todd Miller, Jim Younker, and Charles Seidel. They stand with National Jersey Queen Carol Dreisbach. She holds the award that will be on display permanently at the Ag Center.

Northern Lebanon FFA honors parents, members

BY DONNA McCONAUGHEY
Staff Correspondent

FREDERICKSBURG — The Northern Lebanon High School FFA Chapter held their annual parent and member banquet on March 7 at the school.

Honors were conferred throughout the evening to both parents and members. Chapter Advisor, Gretchen Oberst presented Outstanding FFA Career awards to Eric Swinehart and Michael Kunkle. This honor was bestowed for their overall performance and involvement in FFA during the past years.

Matthew Hetrick received the West Memorial Tractor Driving Trophy. This award was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence West.

Chapter President, Nelson Bomgardner presented Honorary Membership degrees to several adults for their service and involvement in the vocational agriculture program. These recipients included: Mr. and Mrs. John Bomgardner, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Harding Sr., Mrs. Miriam Kunkle, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Swinehart, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ditzler, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cassel, and Mr. Craig Boltz.

Recognized with "Star" awards were: Eugene Kreitzer, Star Chapter Farmer; Eugene Ditzler, Star Agribusinessman; Mark Long, Star Chapter Farmer, Sherry Donmoyer, Star Greenhand; and Wesley Harding Jr., Star Chapter Farmer.

Receiving Chapter trophies were Mike Kunkle, Public Speaking; Nelson Bomgardner, Dairy; John Rupp III, Swine; Eugene Ditzler, Beef; Wesley Harding Jr., Corn Yield and Quality; Tractor Driving, Matthew Hetrick; Sheep, Matthew Hetrick; Poultry, Steve Mease; and Keystone Farmer Trophy, Nelson Bomgardner.

Also included in the evening's program was an address from former chapter member and state FFA Reporter, Heather Hernley. Heather challenged both parents and members to be loyal to FFA "in an age when little commitment is made."

Her message also included a direct challenge to FFA members. "Do you believe in the future of agriculture in this country?—If so, what are you doing to make it a reality? Do you keep haphazard records or good records? Do you participate in activities willingly? Most importantly, do you believe in yourself and your ability to operate an agribusiness or farm?"

This challenge along with the words of Harvey Smith, area advisor, that "These awards don't just happen, they represent much hard work," served as a reminder to not only reflect on the achievements of the past year, but also to plan accept the challenge of the future.

Gretchen Oberst, chapter advisor, presented an Outstanding FFA Career award to Michael Kunkle. Looking on are Nelson Bomgardner, chapter president and Keystone Farmer Degree recipient; and Heather Hernley, state FFA reporter.

GROUND BEEF IS BUDGET STRETCHER

When shopping for nutritious but lower-cost meat, chances are your choices will include ground beef - one of the all-time meat favorites.

Most stores sell several kinds of "ground beef." You may find it labeled as ground beef, ground chuck, ground round, and ground sirloin. The various kinds of ground beef should differ in the cut from which they are made, the amount of fat they contain and the price.

To be at its flavorful best, ground beef should be about 80 percent lean and 20 percent fat. Too little fat results is dry, crumbly and tasteless meat. Ground beef that is produced and packaged under Federal or state inspection at a packing plant or retail warehouse must have no more than 30 percent fat.

Ground beef, sometimes called "hamburger," usually has the most fat and costs the least. It is a good choice for dishes like spaghetti, chili, meat loaf and casseroles.

Ground chuck makes an excellent beef burger or "salisbury steak." It usually has enough fat for good flavor and juiciness.

Ground round is especially good for weight-watchers if the fat is trimmed closely. It is usually quite lean and more expensive than ground beef or chuck. But because of its low fat content, ground round will not be as tender or juicy as the other kinds of ground beef.

Ground sirloin or chopped sirloin generally cost more than ground beef, chuck and round. Its excellent flavor does wonders for special recipes and deluxe burgers. But many people do not want to grind up good sirloin at today's prices.

Remember that ground beef should be used in a day or two after buying if stored in the refrigerator.

Cedar Crest FFA

BY GLENN KNIGHT

LEBANON, PA — Cedar Crest High School Future Farmers have given their top awards to Ed Zuck, Gary Krall, Ann Lansberry and Jon Boyer during their banquet at the middle school cafeteria.

Ed Zuck was selected as the Star Chapter Agribusinessman and Gary Krall was named Star Chapter Farmer. The Dekalb Award for 1984 was presented to Ann Lansberry. The chapter's Star Greenhand was Jon Boyer.

State FFA Secretary Jamie Frey brought greetings from the state association and challenged members of the chapter to strive for increasingly higher goals. Harold Berkheiser, chapter adviser, made the awards presentations.

In addition, Gary Krall, Ann Lansberry and Ed Zuck were presented with their Keystone Degree Pins. Eight members were recognized for scholarship: Gary Krall, Ed Zuck, Gale Hitz, Brenda Peiffer, Jere Patches, Thomas Wells, George Sheldon and Ann Lansberry.

Chapter production awards went to: Gale Hitz, swine; Jeff Ruhl, corn; Lisa Houser, poultry; Ann Lansberry, horse; Brenda Peiffer, dairy and Scott Schwear, beef. Mike Wenrich got the agriculture mechanics trophy and Lisa Houser was named outstanding stockman.

Honorary memberships were given to Dr. Edward Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lansberry, Judy Brightbill, Karl Hellerick and Jack Reed. Guy Ruhl, Joseph Maxwell and William Frazer received certificates of appreciation.

Gary Krall accepts the Cedar Crest Chapter Star Farmer award from Harold Berkheiser, chapter adviser, March 5 during the annual banquet.

Rutgers plans youth parley

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — The Cooperative Extension Service of Cook College, Rutgers University will be conducting a conference on the Role of Farmer Cooperatives in Our Economy, on Saturday, March 30, 1985, for FFA, 4-H members and other youth anticipating employment in agriculture/agribusiness.

The conference will start at 8:30 a.m. at the Extension Conference Center, College Farm Road, Cook College, New Brunswick, New Jersey.

For registration information, contact Dr. Morris Fabian, Extension Specialist in Marketing, Cook College, P.O. Box 231, New Brunswick, New Jersey 08903, or phone (201) 932-9171.

If you freeze the ground beef, package it in amounts to fit your family needs. Use air-tight, moisture-proof wrapping. You can keep ground beef frozen at zero degrees for two to three months with little loss of quality.

Family strenghts symposium planned at Penn State

YORK — The First Eastern Symposium on Building Family Strengths offers more than 70 sessions for professionals committed to strengthening families. Sponsored by the Pennsylvania State University Cooperative Extension Service, the symposium runs from March 25-27 at University Park.

The symposium differs from most because it is aimed at practitioners who work directly with families, rather than scholars, says Dr. James E. Van Horn, associate professor of family sociology extension and one of the conference coordinators. It is an upbeat conference emphasizing a family's strengths, rather than its problems.

Keynote speaker Dr. Nick Stinnett, chairman of the Dept. of Human Development and the Family at the University of Nebraska - Lincoln, will speak on "Building Strong Families: A National Priority." Stinnett has completed several national studies of family strengths and has received the National Creative Programming Award from the University Extension Service. At the University of Nebraska - Lincoln, he initiated a similar symposium, now in its eighth year.

Other speakers include Dr. Carlfred B. Broderick of the University of Southern California, an internationally known authority on the family. The author of more than 55 articles and a number of books, Broderick will discuss "Adolescent Sexuality in a Post-Permissive Society."

Drs. Louise and Bernard G. Guerney, both Penn State professors of human development, will speak on "Integrating Family Therapy & Enrichment." The Guerneys received the 1983 Mace Medal for their contributions to marital enrichment and the 1984 Pennsylvania Psychological Associaition Award of Distinguished Contribution to Psychotherapy.

Other topics to be covered at the symposium include parent education, aging, intergenerational relations, wellness and family economics. Community, school, religion, adolescence and families in special situations will also be discussed.

Preregistration is required due to limited space. A $65 fee covers registration, symposium materials and refreshment breaks. One-day registration, on a space available basis, will cost $30 to cover materials and refreshments for the day selected. For more information on the symposium, contact the Office of Short Courses in Agriculture, 306 Agricultural Administration Building, The Pennsylvania State University, University Park, PA 16802.

PROWL® attacks weeds through the root and shoot for 2-way protection in conservation tillage.

PROWL® herbicide is more photostable, less volatile and less water soluble than some other herbicides. So PROWL stays put, to attack grasses and broadleaf weeds in the root and shoot all season long. PROWL moves through the residue to deliver excellent control of 21 grasses and broadleaf weeds. PROWL. Right for conservation tillage.

Our Colonial ancestors were possessed of a creative ingenuity in the area of crafts that continues to amaze and inspire the modern crafts person. A recent rediscovery is high relief yarning. This basic technique is achieved by passing yarn between two layers of fabric that have been stitched together in such a way as to outline a design or area.

Stitch'n Puff® has made available several beautiful kits designed to introduce the beginner and experienced needleworker to this craft. These kits add a new twist to the original technique by using brightly colored yarn as the filler between the fabric layers. The effect created is soft pastel colors showing through the outer fabric layer. Floral designs are particularly suited to this craft, but equally interesting are geometric and Art Deco patterns.

To begin a project, select a preprinted embroidery pattern printed on 100 percent muslin fabric and an additional piece of muslin of the same dimensions. The second piece (unprinted) will be the finished side of your design.

Place the unprinted piece of fabric on a smooth surface with the printed piece on top. Baste the two pieces together to prevent slipping while working. Next, thread a small needle with a single strand of thread and knot. Working on the printed side, insert the needle and begin outlining with a very small running stitch (eight to 10 stitches per inch).

Stitch around the entire design, making sure to catch the bottom (unprinted) side of the fabric. The bottom piece will be the front of your finished work.

To add the yarn filler between the fabric, start with a double strand of 4-ply yarn. Insert the needle from the printed side between the fabric layers, taking care not to go through the bottom layer of material.

Work the needle and yarn through the layers and bring the needle through just one side of the design area. Pull both strands of the yarn through the design until the ends are flush and cut off even with the fabric.

With your fingernail, stretch the yarn ends and pull the fabric until the yarn disappears between the layers. Repeat this after every pass of the yarn. Continue until the entire design has been filled. If an area is not full enough, use a single stand and repeat the yarning technique. Once the yarn ends have been cut, the yarn is trapped between the layers and cannot be removed.

High relief yarning, popular with our Colonial ancestors, once again is becoming popular with crafts people. This simple beginner design is available in kit form from Stitch 'n Puff.

Greever and Walsh Textiles Inc. (P.O. Box 140, Mountain City, TN 37683) has very clear instructions that are included in each kit as well as many suggestions for shading and pillow making. For more information, write directly to them, or ask your local craft store to help you order their kits.

Pa. calves enter 21st Century Genetics

SHAWANO, Wis. – A pair of Holstein bull calves from Pennsylvania are now available for sampling from 21st Century Genetics Cooperative, Shawano, Wis.

21st Century Genetics is the newly-selected name for the continuation of Midwest Breeders Cooperative, Shawano and Minnesota Valley Breeders Association, New Prague, Minn.

The newest offerings from the full-service cattle breeding cooperative are 21H947 Castlemont Ijon Sylvester-ET, acquired from John Castrogiovanni, Montrose, and 21H949 Oakenbound-W Electra Ferris, acquired from R. R. Troutman and Sons, Richland.

Ferris' maternal grandsire is Whittier-Farms Apollo Rocket. Combined with his sire, Thonyma Electra, Ferris has a Pedigree Index of +779M, +12F, +$70 and a Genetic Index of +882M, +29F, +$106.

Ferris' dam is Oakenbound-W Rocket Felicia, VG-85. As a three-year-old, she had 18,400 pounds of milk, 793 pounds of butterfat and a 4.3 percent fat test in 305 days. Her Cow Index is +696M, +41F, +$114.

Sylvester's maternal grandsire is Hillhaven Standout Job. Combined with his sire, Rockalli Son of Bova, Sylvester has a Pedigree Index of +549M, +27F, +$81 and a Genetic Index of +955M, +45F, +$139.

Sylvester's dam is Castlemont Job Sandra, VG-88. As a four-year-old, she had 29,270 pounds of milk, 1,295 pounds of fat and a 4.4 percent fat test in 305 days. Her Cow Index is +898M, +41F, +$128.

The pair is now housed at the 21st Century Genetics Cooperative junior sire facility in Stewartville, Minn. They are among about 100 high genetic potential young bulls sampled each year by 21st Century Genetics.

Studies have shown 21st Century Genetics junior sires-in-waiting to lead the industry in Pedigree Indexes and projected Predicted Differences (PD's).

The 21st Century Genetics sampling program offers incentive payments, including a bonus for protein testing, to qualified users of junior sire semen. The program has allowed 21st Century Genetics to greatly expand the number of bulls sampling and makes sampling more efficient and accurate.

The pair and the other young bulls will have to wait over four years before their first PD's are calculated. Only about one of six bulls sampled will yield credentials high enough to join the active dairy line-up housed in Shawano and New Prague, Mn.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Some news commentators and editorial writers have been saying that the family farm is dead. A few politicians have been saying that the family farm is no longer a viable entity. This may come as a bit of a surprise to all of you people out there who are successfully operating a farm business. Most of you are operating as a sole proprietorship, which means the whole family is working hard to make things go. If that is not a family farm - what is?

No, the family farm is a long ways from being dead. However, it has changed, but then what segment of our economy has stood still? That so-called dead family farm of the news media and politicians is built from faulty memories and nostalgia.

The real live family farm is still as viable and as essential to our way of life as newspapers, radios, and yet the halls of politicians. They too have changed.

Where once a newspaper could survive on a subscription list of a thousand or in some cases less, they now need more than that to keep up with greater technical demands, reader expectations, and inspections for safe working conditions.

The family farm is the same. The increase in size is at least partly because of the need to keep up in technology. Through the years, milk inspection rules, meat inspection rules, and so on, have taken their toll and have raised the costs of production.

HOW MANY?

One other parallel of the farming community with other business types. As individual farms grow in size, get more efficient, become more specialized, and turn more to labor saving technology, it will take fewer farms to satisfy the market demands.

There are fewer grocery stores around now then there were 20 years ago. Some of you old timers can remember such famous car names as Pierce-Arrow, Cord, DeSoto, and Austin.

Five years from now about three quarters of the personal computer makers of just two years ago will be remembered only by people who own their make of computer. Perhaps there will be antique computer shows.

Who will be the survivors? Again, just like the grocery business, the car industry, the steel industry, etc., the survivors will be those who can sell their product at a price that satisfies the buyer and is profitable to the producer.

There will be one group of survivors that will sneak in like the many types of mini markets that have found niche in the grocery business. These will be farmers who learn how to produce, develop, and market a product direct. They will be clustered in or around population centers and will probably produce fresh fruits and vegetables, herbs, small meat animals such as rabbits and chickens, fish, shrubs, sod, and other specialty products.

According to some recent studies, Pennsylvania will need 28 percent fewer cows by 1995 to produce the same milk as we produce today. How many fewer farmers does that mean and who will they be? You or the other guy?

No, the family farm is not dead. In fact, it is very much alive. Some parts of the family farm group are in trouble, which is unfortunate. But those who survive the next two years will probably become stronger and exert a greater force in the American economy than they do today.

Vegetable growers meet

LANCASTER — Nearly 100 York and Lancaster County vegetable growers met recently at the Farm and Home Center for their 1985 Vegetable Meeting.

The emphasis this year was on pest control and varieties, according to Dr. Peter Ferretti, Penn State Vegetable Specialist, who spoke on asparagus and on "New Recommended Fresh Market Varieties." Other Penn State speakers included Dr. Alan MacNab on vegetable diseases and Dr. Robert Tetrault on vine crop insects.

University of Maryland Vegetable Weed Specialist, Dr. Edward Beste, gave tips on "Vegetable Weed Control" to the audience which also included growers from Lebanon and Dauphin Counties.

A panel discussion involving wholesale dealers and buyers, moderated by Extension Marketing Specialist Larry Yager, rounded out the day's events.

A key component of the meeting was distribution of the 1985-1986 Pennsylvania Commercial Vegetable Production Guide. The Penn State publication is available for $5 from County Agents or from: Publications Clerk, Penn State, 437 Agricultural Administration Bldg., University Park, PA 16802.

The joint Penn State - U.S. Department of Agriculture - sponsored meeting qualified those attending for an update training certificate for the renewal of pesticide licenses and permits.

FEED EFFICIENCY

We make it work for us...

Finishing our feedlot cattle on high price corn makes our proven feed efficient herd sires more valuable than ever
Cow Herd • Bull Test • Feedlot • Carcass
At Devereux Soleil we demand quality and efficiency in every phase of production
We look at the total performance picture

...our proven bulls will make it work for you.

60 Bulls Tested Annually for Feed Efficiency. Feed electronically computed

Consider the costs of feeding cattle, then consider the value of feed efficiency through proven genetics. It costs less to feed a good one.

We will have an open house at the farm on March 30, 1985. Test bulls will be on display and pre-priced with complete test results available. Of the 60 bulls on display, 19 bulls are owned by guest consignors.

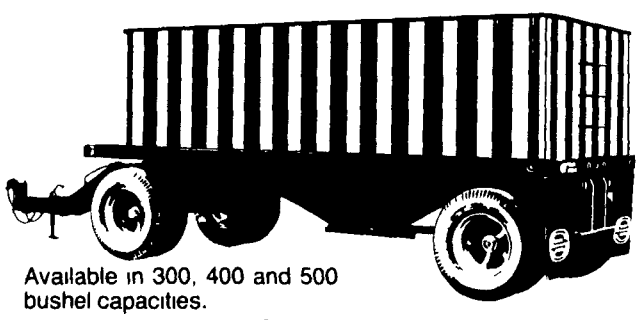
Omaha Standard's

500 Bushel



Available in 300, 400 and 500 bushel capacities.

Grain Pup Trailer

Consider the advantages of owning a heavy-duty Omaha Standard grain pup trailer In addition to cutting grain moving costs by ⅓ or more, you can haul more grain further to elevators offering the best price and you can "contract haul" for your neighbors, too

Omaha Standard's rugged grain pup trailer handles easily over-the-road or in the field, with either truck or tractor Engineered and built to last with many outstanding features, like the 17' center dump hopper box with quick gravity dump, fully steerable front axle with lock pin for easy backing, a drop hinge tongue that doesn't transfer weight to your truck and a convenient tongue jack for easy hook-up

For all the features and specifications, contact us, and while you're here, ask us about Omaha Standard's "clean flow" stakeless steel grain bodies, aluminum grain bodies, the full 96" wide grain and livestock bodies and scissor or "Olympic" telescopic hoists

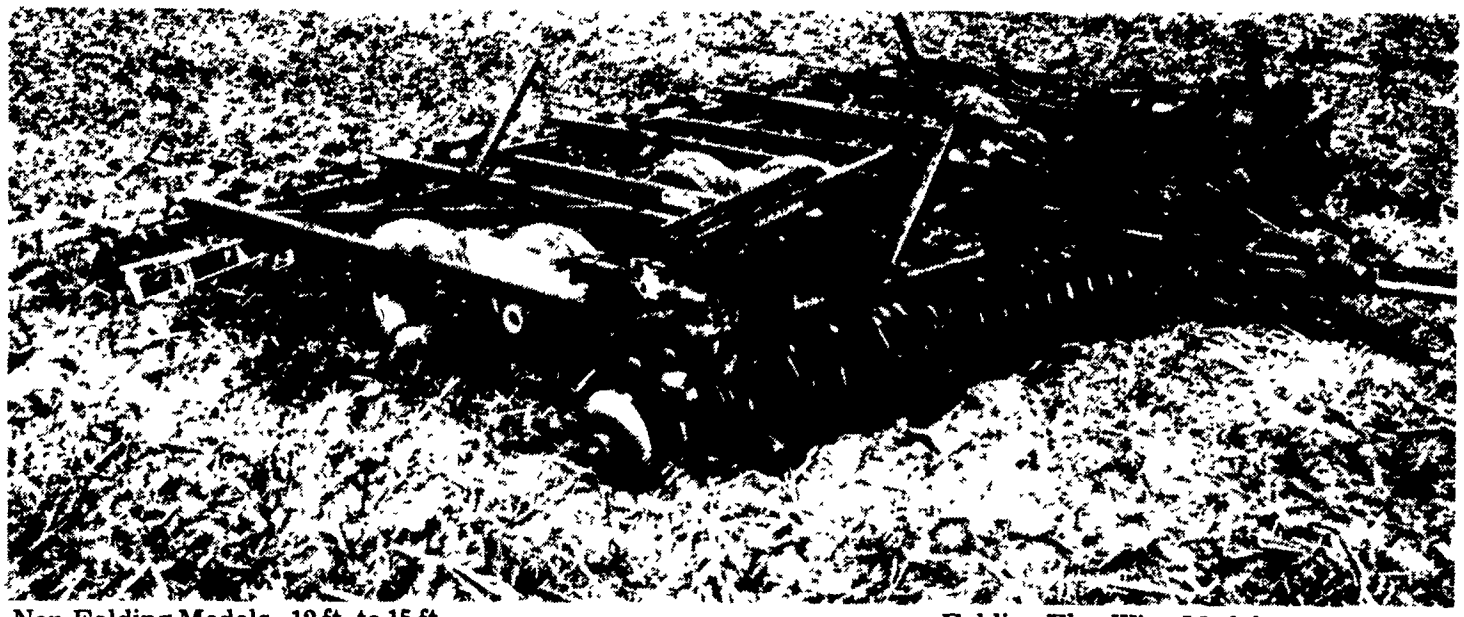
by Krause

An Implement That Can Cut Time And Labor Costs By 50%



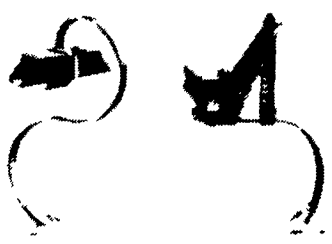
Non-Folding Models - 12 ft. to 15 ft.

Folding Flex Wing Models - 18 ft. to 36 ft.

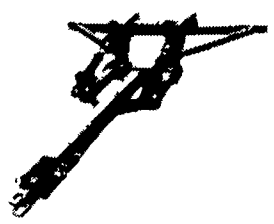
Preparing a seedbed used to take a lot of time, a lot of fuel, and a lot of money.

But now there's a smarter way to get the job done — with a Krause Landsman. It's a unique tillage implement that discs, incorporates chemicals (either deep or shallow), cultivates, and finishes all at once — to prepare your seedbeds with just one pass.

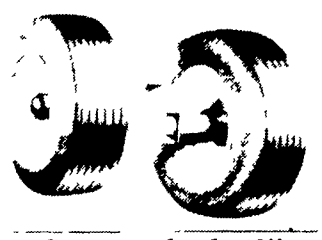
Built with heavy-duty features like these:



Choice of two cultivator shanks, both offering 25" of clearance under frame... Spring-cushioned shanks have rear-mounted shock and come with 10" sweeps. Heavy-duty "K-Tine™" shanks feature a high point load to keep sweeps level and still provide aggressive mixing action.



Massive hitch is an extra-heavy design, proven on Krause disc harrows. It is spring-cushioned to reduce frame stress on uneven ground — a feature most competitors don't offer. Built from heavy 4"x6" steel tubing.



Walking tandem wheels flex over obstacles individually and follow contour of the land for uniform working depth. Staggered only 18" so you can make tight turns without harmful side loading. Regreaseable bearings.

SE Farm Credit picks slate

BY GLENN B. KNIGHT

OXFORD, Pa. — Election of directors highlighted the Annual Stockholder's Meeting of the Southeast Farm Credit System here and in Kulpsville, PA.

Incumbent Director Wallace G. Derstein, Hatfield, was re-elected to a 3-year term on the Production Credit Association board while Cochranville dairyman Paul J. King was picked for the other PCA directorship. Derstein, current joint board chairman, operates a dairy farm and retail dairy store in Montgomery County.

Elected to 3-year directorships of the local Federal Land Bank Association were the current vice-president, Harold A. Knechel, Harleysville, and Paul E. Daniels, a dairy farmer and bottled raw milk operator from Pineville, Bucks County.

The Southeast Farm Credit System covers the counties of Chester, Delaware, Bucks, Montgomery and Philadelphia. Five hundred forty five of the association's more than 2,000 members attended the meetings. At Oxford they met at the fire hall and in Kulpsville the meeting was held at the Christopher Dock Mennonite High School.

During the business meeting, Earl B. Stover, retiring president of the FLBA, thanked everyone for their cooperation during his terms of service and wished them all well.

The system currently has outstanding loans in excess of $130,000,000 with offices in West Chester, Silverdale and Avondale.

NFO meeting set for March 23

DOYLESTOWN — Walter Albers will be the featured speaker at the annual dinner of the Bucks County unit of the National Farmers Organization, to be held on Saturday, March 23, at 7:00 p.m. The public is invited to attend the meeting at Plumsteadville Fire Hall.

Albers joined the National Farmers Organization in 1963 and has been a member of the Ohio State Board of the NFO since 1973.

Tickets for the family-style beef dinner are $6.50 each, and may be purchased by calling William Garges (348-5514) or Web Singer (346-7749).

How to get a good turnover.

Our powerful 5HP and 7HP tillers are easy to start, thanks to Automatic Decompression. And they're easy to operate, with all the controls conveniently located on the handles. Both are self-propelled with 2 forward and 1 reverse gear, and have rugged Honda 4-stroke engines with quiet, efficient mufflers. The only hard part with a Honda tiller is deciding which one to get.

Hoffman Seeds open house

LANDISVILLE, Pa. – "Farmer Recognition Days" at Hoffman Seeds, Inc., gave the local Funk's distributor a chance to show their customers what goes on behind the scenes.

Following a tour of the warehouses and shipping facilities, visitors got a closeup look at the seed testing laboratory where technicians make sure that the seed shipped out meets or exceeds Hoffman's standards.

On hand for the two-day event was Dana Trimble, Hoffman's mid-west production manager who explained how the seed corn was grown, detassled, harvested, dried and sized for local use.

To explain Funk's new Eastern Screening Location, Steve Gartner noted that selection of the proper Funk's G-Hybrids can result in improved future releases.

Information was also available on Hoffman's new Maxim and Emerald alfalfas. Maxim growers report a significant yield advantage and Emerald's 2-year yield average was tops in the Penn State Verticillium Wilt Trial.

Vicon Winter Special On SEEDER/SPREADERS Vicon

the New Dimension in seeding/spreading

Over the past two decades Vicon pendulum action seeders/spreaders have become an integral part of the farming scene Now Vicon Vari-spreaders are entering a New Dimension a completely new range of spreaders featuring a characteristic new design and incorporating the latest technology to give the accuracy and reliability demanded by todays profit conscious farmer Pendulum action gives the advantage of accuracy on sloping ground as well as on the flat, coupled with the ability to spread all types of solid fertilizer, chemicals, seeds, powders and lime

The six models in the new range offer capacities to suit the needs of every farm size A special feature of the New Dimension spreaders is an easily adjustable flywheel which changes the effective spreading widths from 20-45 feet a sound investment for profitability

IT'S ALWAYS ON THE LEVEL.

Vicon's new Automatic Stabilizing (AS) spray booms make the ups and downs of chemical application a lot easier to take. The AS linkage system lets you set for flat land or hillside spraying and maintain a level, accurate spray pattern across the width of the boom. For more information, see your Vicon dealer

KNIGHT... The Last Spreader You Will Need To Buy For Many Years

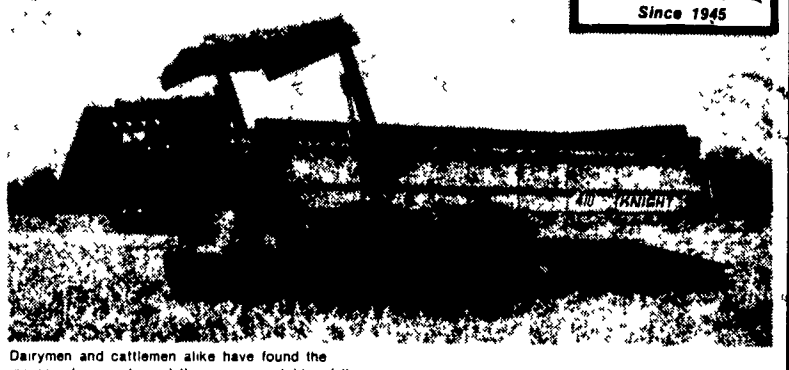
KNIGHT "410" MANURE SPREADER

You can depend on a Knight Since 1945



Dairymen and cattlemen alike have found the increased capacity and the maneuverability of the #410 spreader advantageous to their operations

The #410 offers the low profile of the model #350 yet carries a larger load — 20¾ longer and 2 deeper 4 x 6 hardwood top rails are standard Available with 8 bolt 20 tandem wheels or the #410 may also be truck mounted

The box construction is heavy duty all steel with 10 ga bottom and 11 ga sides welded as one unit Heavy auger style beaters with alloy steel ripper teeth shred frozen manure for easy spreading Hydro fluid endgate seals sloppy manure Auger type top beaters spread that extra high load

You can expect top performance and you'll get it from the Knight #410 manure spreader

For fine spreading of semi solid or loose material the optional lower spinner beater can be added Especially good for spreading on seeding

REMEMBER...We Stock All Sizes.

Early Riser Planters

case ih

EARLY RISER GIVES YOU BUILT-IN NO-TILL PERFORMANCE AT NO EXTRA COST.

Are you looking for a planter that can go from conventional-till to min-till or no-till without the extra cost of no-till colters? Then International Harvester has the answer...the International® 800 Series Early Riser planter.

In side-by-side, on-farm tests, an independent testing agency confirmed that the exclusive design of the International narrow angle, staggered double disk openers penetrated hard ground and sliced through trash better than two other popular competitive planters equipped with colters.

Tests also proved that the Early Riser outperformed the other two planters in both emergence and yield. Furthermore, farmers confirmed that the Early Riser was faster and easier to adjust and calibrate in all planting conditions.

So if you're considering a new planter, get the planter that's ready for no-till when you are...the International Early Riser. See us today for details.

Test results as verified by Crop Pro Tech Inc., Naperville, Illinois

2900 Gal. Tank w/Easy Loader

NOW (Patent Pending)

You can haul liquid Manure all day without getting off the Tractor Seat using the SLURRY BUGGY Easy Loader

1.) Back up to pit or lagoon. Lower easy loader (boom) from tractor (by hydraulic)
2.) Engage PTO Switch pump to vacuum
3.) Float level indicator shows when tank is full
4.) Stop PTO Raise boom and head for the field
5.) In field. Switch pump to pressure. Start PTO. Open Valve and unload.

A liquid manure spreader that loads and unloads and has no chains, bearings, fans, augers, or moving parts that touch manure.
For more information call or write.

PLANTING EQUIPMENT CLINIC

JOHN DEERE PLANTER SERVICE CLINIC

Monday, April 1, 1985 1 P.M.

Don't let this years planting season make you feel like an "APRIL FOOL". Be ready by joining us Monday, April 1st at 1:00 pm for a John Deere Planter Service Clinic. See the newest in acre meters, computer track monitors, Depth-A-Matic units. And also get some valuable information on maintenance, use and adjustments. The meeting will be conducted by "Wally Boston" John Deere Company. If there are any Parts or Information you want for that day, Feel free to give me a call.

Thanks,
Dave McGinnis

Serving Customers in 20 States Coast to Coast.

Complete TA assemblies for 706-1586 are priced at $595 and come with a Dana Co Heavy Duty Sprag instead of the usual IH sprag. The Dana sprag is guaranteed for 2 years against failure. Sprag kits (includes sprag gear, Dana sprag, and piston carrier) and all items for rebuilding your own TA are available to qualified persons. Ramps and carriers for the older style TA's (as in SMTA, 340, 560) are priced at $150 each and carry a 90 day guarantee. We have all the parts needed to rebuild your TA in stock at prices that will save you money We also have a shop available for complete TA installation. Or, you may split your own tractor and bring the center housing to us, which we can rebuild while you wait (approx 4-6 hrs) We also stock New and Rebuilt Water Pumps, Dynlife Clutches, Pressure Plates, and PTO Drive Gears, (Spline-fit into pressure plates) ,for most IH tractors and combines

— QUALITY USED PARTS —

Glaze
"For Better Silo Protection"

- To protect silo plaster linings from attack by silage juice
- To provide maximum life for new silo plaster linings and new uncoated monolithic silos
- As the basic product in providing a cost effective maintenance program for stave and monolithic silos
- To reduce the susceptibility to spoilage of silage in used silos
- As a penetrant on any concrete surface, vertical or horizontal, requiring added resistance to moisture and mildly acidic or alkaline chemicals
- To provide resistance to silage juice attack and extend the life of Gunnite or Shotcrete repaired silo interiors

Silage juice is acidic and concrete is porous As concrete absorbs silage juice the cement which bonds the sand and aggregate together is slowly destroyed Dust sand and aggregate can be brushed from the interior surface of a silo that has been in use for several years Deterioration can proceed to the point that air readily enters the silo contributing to ring spoilage Damage can occur even in coated silos if pinholes in the coating permit entry of silage juice to attack the cement Damage will be especially heavy at the bottom of the silo where silage juice concentration is the greatest

Early tests indicated that a penetrant was superior to a coating Following development of GLAZE 500 silos were treated and studied over a period of five years It was found that GLAZE

2 Protects walls from the action of water as well as silage juice minimizing damage from freeze-thaw cycles
3 Eliminates spoilage where it exists Walls fed down clean
4 Taste and quality of silage were not affected

A maintenance program initiated in the early life of a silo with GLAZE applied at five year intervals will ensure a long life for the silo at a reasonable maintenance cost The life of any concrete surface subject to continual attack by moisture will be extended by periodic applications of GLAZE

This product contains no PCB's or similar chemicals considered harmful No adverse effect on animals has been reported in over 25 years usage of this product in farm silos

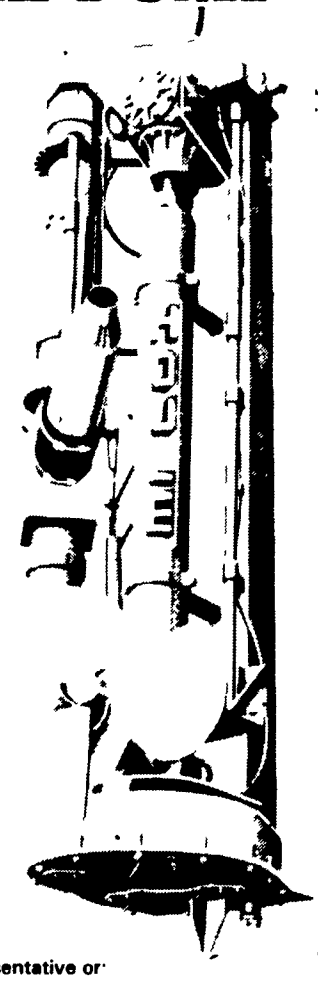
The MANURE PUMP with a BIG BITE

If you are trying to agitate and pump manure without this big propellor and positive cutting blade, you probably aren't doing it as fast as you could.



This big 24" steerable propellor agitates even the hardest of manure storage pits with heavy bedding at displacement rates of 18,000 gallons per minute. The cutting blade will chop long straw bedding and hay from feed bunks to mix it into a rich and creamy fertilizer. This pump is available for all sizes of storage areas in lagoon, trailer, 3-point hitch, and stationary models.

Don't be caught short of enough pump to do the job.

ProTek™

PAT PENDING

"I'd call this a major scientific discovery for dairy feeding."

When you can reduce protein in the milking ration by 15 to 20 percent while maintaining milk production, that's efficiency! And that's exactly what new ProTek™ feeding is all about.

This new technology of protein treatment can greatly improve protein utilization by dairy cows. And do it consistently. That's because ProTek is a unique new process rather than just another reformulation of protein sources. It's an exclusive process developed by Central Soya Research. Patent is pending.

Angus Assoc. increases scholarship fund

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — The American Angus Auxiliary will award college scholarships totaling $8,000 to ten deserving high school graduating seniors. Five girl and five boy winners most active in Angus projects, school, community and church activities will be selected from the respective state Angus scholarship applications.

Both the amount of money and number of scholarships has been increased for 1985. First place scholarships in each group will be $1,500; second place, $1,000, third place, $700; fourth place, $500 and fifth place, $300. The entry deadline is June 25.

The top five girl applications will be invited to the Angus Auxiliary annual meeting held at the North American International Livestock Exposition in Louisville, Kentucky, next November, where they will be interviewed for the National Miss American Angus title. Scholarship winners will be announced at the All American Angus Breeder's Futurity in Louisville, August 5-6 following the judging of applications.

Applications for scholarships may be made through state or regional Angus Auxiliaries. Applications are also available from the American Angus Auxiliary Scholarship Chairperson, Mrs. James R. Moxley, Jr., 13155 Route 144, West Friendship, Maryland 21794.

Fence Workshop set for March 23

LANCASTER — K & R Fence of 933 Village Road in the village of Lampeter is sponsoring a Gallagher/Spring-Tight Power Fence Workshop on Saturday, March 23.

In addition to slide shows and presentations of a variety of fencing materials, the workshop will feature hands-on instruction in grounding, electrical hookup, corner construction, anchor installations and general project planning.

SCPPPA to hold feeder pig show/sale

CARLISLE — The South Central Pennsylvania Pork Producers will hold their Annual Feeder Pig Show and Sale on Friday, April 12, at the Carlisle Livestock Market, Carlisle.

Held in conjunction with the State Graded Feeder Pig Sale, the Show and Sale will feature pigs suitable for 4-H and FFA projects. Only the top three pigs in each class will be sold as individuals.

The show begins at 12:15 p.m. in the sale arena, with the State Graded Sale getting underway at 1:30, followed by the sale of show pigs. Entry deadline is Mar. 31.

For more information contact Kent Strock, 729 Williams Grove Rd., Mechanicsburg, PA, 17055, or phone: 717-697-2824.

NCA gets $32,000 for promotion

Security guards stood watch as $32,210 in cold cash was presented to the National Cattlemen's Association (NCA) at their recent annual meeting in Phoenix, Ariz. The funds were provided to NCA to invest in market development projects for beef as part of Velsicol's Operation Trade Expansion.

Under the terms of the program, for every gallon of Velsicol herbicide sold and reported by a farmer last year, Velsicol donated 50 cents to either NCA or five other participating farm commodity groups. A total of $249,887 was raised last year to build markets for beef, wheat, corn, pork, cotton and real dairy foods.

Livestock Ledger

Vaccines used in an established health program can help reduce many different infectious disease problems in cattle. A number of new vaccines and combination vaccines have been introduced in the last few years. It's important to know which vaccines to use on your farm, when to use them, and what other measures are necessary for disease control.

Use of vaccines that are not appropriate for your operation can increase costs unnecessarily. It is best to consult with your veterinarian on the selection of vaccines. Livestock producers administering vaccines on their own should understand thoroughly how to give a vaccine in the proper site with the correct injection route.

Vaccines are given by several different routes. Intramuscular (IM) and subcutaneous (Sub-Q) injection are the most commonly used routes. Some vaccines are given orally, intranasally (IN), or intradermally (ID). Failure to give vaccines by the proper route may result in failure of the vaccine to immunize. Undesirable local reactions may occur, in some cases, if vaccines are given improperly.

Many antibiotics, some vaccines and some serums are given by the intramuscular (IM) route. Because of the vigorous blood supply to muscle tissue, substances injected into it are picked up by the blood and spread to all tissues of the body very rapidly.

A needle, 1 to 1-1/2 inches in length and 16 or 18 gauge in diameter, is best for making IM injections. The best location for IM injection is the heavy muscle just below the pin bone on the hind leg. The heavily muscled neck region is also good. Somewhat less desirable is the flat region between pin bone and hook bone.

The needle should be inserted perpendicular to the skin. No more than 20 cc. of medicine should be given at one injection site. If larger amounts are needed, the needle should be withdrawn and additional medicine given in the opposite muscle. To avoid accidental intravenous administration, reposition the needle if blood appears in syringe when plunger is pulled back.

Many vaccines and some other drugs are given by the subcutaneous (Sub-Q) route because absorption is slower in subcutaneous tissues. It is not necessary that these substances be picked up by the blood as rapidly as those given by the IM route; it may be desirable that they be absorbed more slowly. A needle, 1 inch in length and 16 or 18 gauge in diameter, is best for this procedure. When attached to the syringe loaded with the proper medicine, the needle unit is thrust through the skin and the material injected just beneath the skin.

The needle should be inserted at an angle, not perpendicular to the skin. The loose skin on the side of the neck is a good location for Sub-Q injection. When the animal is quiet and well restrained, grasp the skin with the thumb and forefinger to create a space beneath the skin into which the vaccine is deposited.

For more information on cattle vaccines ask your County Extension Agent for Special Circular 306, "Cattle Vaccines" which has just been released.

The Cooperative Extension Service is an affirmative action, equal opportunity, educational institution.

Western Pa. will host Pork Field Day

BUTLER — The Western Pennsylvania Pork Producers Field Day will be held at the Butler County Farm Show Grounds, May 4th beginning at 9:00 a.m. The grounds are located on Rt. 68 a short distance west of Butler.

The field day is being co-sponsored by Penn State Extension and pork industry people. More than twenty commercial exhibits will be in place with people available to answer questions. Previous years' exhibitors included equipment dealers, feed dealers, breeding companies, and herd health product companies.

Gene Ishler, swine specialist from Ohio State University, will be the featured speaker. During the morning program he will discuss swine buildings and herd management. His part of the afternoon program is titled, "Cross Breeding for Profit."

Other subjects to be covered include: Marketing Trends & Futures; Herd Health — New Concerns; Use of Computers; and Managing a Sows's Sex Life. The program will conclude with a panel discussion, the panel being composed of the day's speakers.

Details on the field day may be obtained by contacting any western Pennsylvania County Extension Office.

Lancaster Pork Seminar will focus on A.I.

LANCASTER — "Increasing Profits Through Genetics" is the theme for this year's Progressive Pork Producers Seminar to be held from 9:00 a.m.- 4:00 p.m., March 28, 1985 at the Farm and Home Center Auditorium, Lancaster.

The seminar, geared towards Swine Artificial Insemination, features Dr. Gene Isler, Genetics Specialist, Ohio State University. He will cover topics relating to "Improving Herd Profits by Genetics," "Sow Productivity Indexing and Record Evaluation," and "A.I. Collection and Disemination."

In addition, local Lancaster swine veterinarians Dr. Robert Graybill and Dr. Timothy P. Trayer will discuss "Reproductive Health" and "Farrowing and Estrus Synchronization." A panel of local swine producers will relate their experiences and successes with artificial insemination with those in attendance.

The seminar is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council and the Penn State Extension Service. For reservations, contact Chester D. Hughes, Extension Livestock Agent, Lancaster at 717/394-6851.

Outstanding Brown Swiss record

BELOIT, Wis. — Two cows from the registered Brown Swiss herd of Arthur Litton, Clear Spring, Md., have completed outstanding DHIR production records.

Surpassing the levels set by the national Brown Swiss association for special recognition were: Vindobona Gretchens Nell 671942 and Vindobona Judy's Greta 628350.

At 4 years and 5 months, Nell produced 15,900 pounds milk, 702 pounds fat at 4.4 percent test and 644 pounds protein at 4.1 percent.

Greta set a record at 7 years and 8 months of 22,760 pounds milk, 965 pounds fat at 4.2 percent test, and 872 pounds protein at 3.8 percent.

SOIL
We can't grow without it
NATIONAL WILDLIFE WEEK, MARCH 17-23, 1985
JOIN AND SUPPORT THE NATIONAL WILDLIFE FEDERATION AND STATE AFFILIATES

That's the National Wildlife Federation's opinion of the Myers farm

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

DALLASTOWN — Soil - we can't grow without it.

For the National Wildlife Federation, that's the slogan for this year's national Wildlife Week, March 17-23.

But for the Jack Myers farm family, Dallastown R1, it's more than just a slogan. Soil, growing in it, and conserving it, is a way of life.

And that's how this family's picture-perfect Dunkard Valley Stock Farm came to be featured on the Wildlife Week's nationally-distributed promotional poster.

Myers' farming roots go deep into the soil of this York County Century Farm and keeping the rich topsoil on the sloping hills and curving contours has been a continuing concern.

So, various conservation measures have been implemented over the years, to hold the soil in place for the grain, hay and market truck crops that make up part of the farm's production commodities.

Contoured and strip-cropped fields curl around the farm's terrain which ranges from sloping ridge tops to flatter bottomground in the picturesque Dunkard Valley. Diversion terrances and sod waterways handle heavy runoff from the steeper farm ground.

On lower-lying, spring-prone soil, over 3,000 feet of tile drainage direct underground waters toward the East Branch of the Codorus, into the Lake Redman water storage for the city of York and surrounding communities.

The Myers farm's diversity of conservation practices had been viewed a few years ago as part of the county's annual conservation tour. Along on that visit was York district conservationist Riggs Harwell, who remembered the beauty of the farm and surrounding hills when Soil Conservation Service photographers inquired last year about possible photo sites.

"They spent about a week around the farm; we'd see the car as we came and went," remembers Nancy Myers of their mid-June visitors.

The result is a beautifully-colored glossy poster, early morning sun casting shadows behind the cluster of white farm buildings, the Dunkard Valley hillside striped in hues of green, from the pale yellowish of ripening barley to the rich kelly shade of leafy alfalfa.

Smaller insets add splashes of color contrast: a youngster nibbling at a ripe, red watermelon slice, delicate pink apple blossoms and a rusty-orange, wide-eyed fox.

The ancestral farmers of the Myers family arrived from Switzerland even before the Revolution, settling in the area of green hills and valleys which may well have reminded them of their native land.

Howard Myers, Jack's father, purchased additional land in 1941, and the farm now includes over 200 acres owned. Their son Andy, eldest of the children and farm manager, crops an additional 150 acres of rented ground.

Corn, hay, wheat, oats and barley are part of the "poster farm" rotation program. Jack and Nancy continue the farmers' market business started over 50 years ago by his father, tending stands a total of four days weekly at the downtown Central and Eastern market.

Sweet corn, cantaloupes and potatoes are the largest truck crop plantings, with complementing seasonal produce from ealry strawberries and peas through late summer lima beans and watermelons. Fresh poultry - home raised capons are a speciality - and fresh eggs are also part of the market fare.

Three generations of Myers' currently call the farm home. Jack and Nancy, with their two youngest, John 18, and Kenley, 12, reside in the 150-year-old house on the "newer" portion of the farm. Andy, his wife Belinda, and their children, Wade, 9, and year-old Katie, live on the Century farm section, in a house dating to the 1700's. Another daughter and her family also have a home on the farm.

Over 20 million school children are expected to view the Wildlife Week poster, part of a free educational kit being mailed to teachers around the nation.

Del. Extension offers crop insurance advice

NEWARK, Del. – Farming involves many kinds of risk. There are production risks, such as yield variability due to weather. These can be reduced by diversifying production or by irrigating. There are physical risks which can be reduced by safe farming practices. There are marketing risks which can be managed by using different marketing strategies (cash sales, forward contracting, commodity options or hedging on the futures market) to lock in a profitable price. And there are financial risks incurred when borrowing money. Failure to manage any of these risks effectively can put a farmer out of business.

Many farmers today are in serious financial trouble. Whether they stay in production through the end of this decade will depend on how well they manage their affairs over the next few years in order to remain on the land until times get better. This calls for skillful use of survival tactics.

Multi-peril crop insurance is one survival tactic producers can use to protect themselves from income loss because of low yields. According to University of Delaware assistant extension farm management specialist Mark Kooker, insurance can be a valuable risk reduction tool on farms that are prone to yield fluctuations.

"When you've borrowed money you're in great financial jeopardy if you can't pay your debts," Kooker says. "Crop insurance is the only federal program that deals with financial risk by allowing farmers to protect themselves against losses due to crop failure."

Crop insurance does not cover poor farming practices, theft or low commodity prices.

Yield goals on eligible vegetables in 1985 will be established using either growers' production records or county records.

Under the grower yield certification (GYC) plan, says Kooker, if a grower has production records for the past five years, these figures will be used to certify yield averages for that particular farm. If the grower can document less than five years' yields, these will be combined with county records to determine yield goals for insurance purposes.

"The higher your production average, the lower your unit cost for insurance, so if your yields are routinely above the county average, it pays to be able to show this," Kooker says.

Three price levels and three coverage levels are available for each crop, the specialist says. Coverage level one, for 50 percent, protects the policyholder against more than 50 percent reduction in yield. Level two provides 65 percent coverage (against a yield loss of over 35 percent), and level three gives the grower 75 percent coverage (or protection against more than a 25 percent loss). In deciding how much coverage to buy, it is important to know the probability of a loss for a given crop.

When does it pay to have crop insurance? "Your financial position and yield variability are the major factors to consider," Kooker says. "This is my rule of thumb in advising farmers: Look back over your yields and see if you had more than 25 percent loss any year of the last five to ten years. If you did, consider using crop insurance.

"A second test," he says, "is to look at your farm's current financial position. Can you afford another major loss? If not, consider crop insurance."

According to Kooker, multi-peril crop insurance will eventually replace all ASCS/USDA crop disaster programs now in effect. The decision to go this route was made in 1980. The federal government's goal is to cover all U.S. commercial crops by 1987, using either GYC or actual production history (APH) to establish yield goals.

To cut costs, the government has changed the way it markets crop insurance. As in the past, all policies were underwritten by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation. But in most parts of the country, in 1985 policies are being sold through private companies.

There are several ways farmers can find out about insuring their crops. They can contact an agent who sells crop insurance, the ASCS, or their county extension office. They can also call Kooker directly at 302-451-2511. He has prepared a fact sheet, "Multi-Peril Crop Insurance: A Management Tool," which is available at all Delaware extension offices.

Planting of corn, soybeans, oats will increase

HARRISBURG – Pennsylvania farmers intend to plant more acres of corn, oats and soybeans than in 1984, according to the Pennsylvania Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Intended acreage to be planted and percent change from last year are as follows: corn, 1,870,000 acres, up five percent; oats, 360,000 acres, up 20 percent; barley, 70,000 acres, down seven percent; all hay, 1,980,000 acres, unchanged; soybeans, 200,000 acres, up 14 percent; and tobacco, 12,000 acres, unchanged.

United States farmers intend to plant more acres of corn, oats, barley and all hay, but fewer acres of tobacco and soybeans. Intended acreage to be planted and percent change from last year are as follows: corn, 82.02 million acres, up two percent; oats, 12.94 million acres, up five percent; barley, 12.38 million acres, up four percent; all hay, 62.28 million acres, up one percent; soybeans, 64.36 million acres, down five percent; and tobacco, 714,690 acres, down 10 percent.

If the engine quits, two-way radio could pay for itself today.

Lose just one day during the planting season and it could make all the difference between a good crop and a poor one

That s why you should be equipped with a Johnson FM two-way radio

With two-way radio if your engine quits you can simply call for help Chances are a mechanic can get to you and get you going again while there s still some daylight left

But without two-way radio you d just have to start walking

Consider Sulphur deficiency in high-yield crop programs

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Wheat growers are reminded that the persistent use of high-analysis N-P-K fertilizers over the past decade, plus the popularity of high-yielding varieties that tax soil nutrient reserves, has made U.S. acreage more susceptible to sulphur deficiency.

Without adequate sulphur, wheat cannot be expected to reach its full potential in terms of yield, quality or protein content, says Bob Morris, agronomist at The Sulphur Institute, an international trade group based in Washington, D.C.

"A sulphur deficiency can also prevent your crop from making efficient use of applied nitrogen fertilizers," he claims. "Top-dressing additional N to a field that is even marginally sulphur deficient can throw off the crop's internal nutrient balance and actually induce a more severe sulphur deficiency in the crop."

Sulphur, which aids protein and chlorophyll formation in plants, is one of 16 basic elements needed to support plant life. In the past, soils may have received ample sulphur from the atmosphere to support crop yields. Significant sulphur was also included in traditional plant foods like ammonium sulfate and ordinary superphosphate.

"Today's high-analysis N fertilizers – such as urea, ammonium nitrate and UAN solution – do not contain any incidental sulphur," Morris says. "What's more, the higher yields produced by farmers today remove more nutrients from the soil."

Cleaner air resulting from pollution-control regulations have also decreased the amount of "free" sulphur that crops get from the atmosphere, he adds.

"We're still getting sulphur from the atmosphere," says Morris, pointing to environmental concerns about acid rain. "But in some regions we're evidently not getting enough S from the atmosphere to support today's high-yielding crop varieties."

A 100-bushel wheat yield removes 25 pounds of sulphur per acre from the soil.

To produce optimum yield and make efficient use of applied N, a wheat crop should contain one unit of S for every 10-12 units of N. A narrower ratio of applied sulphur and nitrogen will help maintain this ratio, Morris says.

Following is a summary of results from sulphur fertilization, as recorded recently by major land-grant universities:

- At Oregon State University, topdressing 10 pounds S increased wheat yields from 48 to 69 bushels per acre.
- At Kansas State University, with a nitrogen rate of 60 pounds per acre, 60 pounds S boosted wheat yields by 6.1 bushels. When N rate was increased to 120 pounds per acre and no extra S was applied, only a 7.5-bushel increased was recorded.
- At Penn State University, on heavy clay soils where S deficiency is generally not a problem, top-dressing 30 pounds S boosted wheat yields 9.3 bushels per acre.
- At the University of Georgia, 25 pounds S increased wheat yield 5.2 bushels per acre.
- At N.C. State University, wheat yields jumped 10.3 bushels when the university applied 80 pounds S per acre.
- Morris says that crop responses to sulphur may not always be as dramatic or as profitable as those recorded in the above studies. "But these data demonstrate how important sulphur can be in a high-yield program," he says.

"If you don't need sulphur in your fertilizer program, then don't use it," Morris concludes. "The point is that S deficiencies are more likely to occur today than in previous years, and growers would be wise to keep tabs on their soil's sulphur status."

Farmers should consult their fertilizer suppliers about the most economical sources of S in their immediate area.

The Earth that moved

By Mercer Cross
National Geographic Society

WASHINGTON — Among followers of oddball natural occurrences, it's called the "cookie-cutter" puzzle.

The term refers to a mysterious hole in the ground that was discovered last October in northwestern Washington state, on the Colville Indian Reservation, not far from the Grand Coulee Dam.

A chunk of earth 10 feet long, 7 feet wide, and 18 inches to 2 feed deep, weighing at least a couple of tons, was uprooted from a depression in a wheat field. It apparently arced through the air, rotating slightly en route, and landed virtually intact 73 feet away.

Since then, winter storms have blanketed the hole with snow. Cows grazing in the field have trampled down the edges.

Scientists Mystified

Nobody has figured out how or why the dirt took flight. Several scientists have examined the divot and come away scratching their heads. Investigators of unidentified-flying-objects (UFO) phenomena have expressed interest.

Okanogan County farmers Rick and Pete Timm, who found the displaced dirt, notified Don Aubertin, director of mining on the Indian reservation. He suspected a meteorite fragment. A geologist hired by the reservation took a look and said no.

"There was no sign of impact," Aubertin told a newspaper reporter in November, when the story came to public attention. "The hole was not a crater. It had vertical walls and a fairly flat bottom. It was almost as though it had been cut out with a giant cookie cutter."

Theories abound. One is that an earthquake caused the freakish upheaval. A quake with a 3.0 rating on the Richter scale, its epicenter some 20 miles from the hole, had rattled the area nine days before the Timm brothers' discovery.

Stephen D. Malone, a University of Washington earthquake expert, discounts that possibility as "beyond the incredible." A quake that small, he explains, lacks the power to boost a heavy patch of turf out of the ground.

"A hoax, I think, is a possibility," Malone says. So do some other scientists who have not inspected the site.

Others say they don't see how a hoax could have been perpetrated in the field, situated in a remote area sprinkled with massive boulders that local residents call "haystack rocks."

For one thing, no signs of human intrusion — no wheel tracks, footprints, or evidence of machinery — were found.

Robert L. Schuster, a geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., examined the puzzling hole. He leans toward the theory that an underground methane gas explosion may have popped the earth out.

Glut of Theories

"I'm not ruling out the earthquake, myself," says Greg Behrens, a geologist with the federal Bureau of Reclamation at Grand Coulee Dam. Behrens, who probably has spent more time studying the riddle than anyone else, things the methane theory is improbably.

Nevertheless, in November he sent soil samples to the bureau's regional office in Boise, Idaho, for analysis. No lab tests had been conducted by February; low priority and a shortage of staff were given as reasons. The government plans no further investigations.

The quake could have generated concentric surface seismic waves, Behrens says. "Trouble is," he wrote John P. Timmerman, chairman and treasurer of the Center for UFO Studies, in December, "that anything this large has neither been witnessed nor monitored during a seismic event."

In his letter to Timmerman, Behrens cited other potential natural causes of the so-far inexplicable uplifting: a "freak tornado" or a "complex freezing action" combined with strong winds. But, he wanly noted, the weather was warm when the incident is supposed to have occurred.

Behrens went on to mention several conceivable man-made causes, among them an excavation

"Man has done more spectacular things," Behrens concluded. "But the cost would be high and the profit nil."

The cookie-cutter mystery "doesn't hold up as a very strong case for our field of study," says Timmerman, a savings-and-loan executive in Lima, Ohio. But, he adds, "It's a little hard to walk away from something like this, because it's so tantalizing. It's very suggestive."

One scientist who is particularly tantalized by the Washington incident is Bruce N. Kaliser, hazards geologist for the Utah Geological and Mineral Survey.

Ponders Earlier Phenomenon

In 1978, on an inspection trip following a 3.5 earthquake in northern Utah, he came upon a cross-shaped depression 14 feet in diameter. The "only possible explanation" for it, Kaliser concluded, was "an object dropped from an aircraft," possibly a large chunk of ice.

Holes in our planet almost never go unexplained. Most common are sinkholes, the kind that occasionally make headlines with cave-ins that swallow buildings, cars, and sometimes people. Such subsidence, as it is called, usually occurs in the 15 percent of the United States that overlies soluble limestone that erodes underground, from causes both natural and man-made.

Nobody can say with certainty whether an answer to the enigma will ever be found. "It's the most bizarre thing I ever saw," says Don Aubertin.

'External forces' cause farm woes, expert says

ITHACA, NY — Dramatic political and economic shifts on the national and international scene have financially buried many American farmers, says a Cornell University economist.

"These external forces are overwhelming our farmers," asserts John Brake, the William I. Myers professor of agricultural finance in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell. "Farmers are by no means responsible for the current farm crisis."

Chief among these external factors was the steep rise in interest rates. The interest rate at which farmers borrowed money from banks, for example, went eight to 18 percent in the years from 1977 through 1981. During 1975-1981, U.S. farmers' interest expenses tripled.

High interest rates have had two effects: first, farmers have to spend more and more money just to pay interest on their loans; and second, high interest rates weakened agricultural exports for American farmers.

"These factors are aggravating the high debt problem now crippling many farmers," says Brake. "In 1983, farmers as a group spent more money on interest alone than they earned in total net farm income."

That debt load resulted primarily from agricultural expansion in the 1970s. Both young people breaking into farming and established farmers who wanted to expand had no choice but to pay the high interest rates prevalent in the late 1970s.

What triggered this expansion? Brake lists several major factors, including:

- land values which have fallen only once since 1940,
- interest rates which were below the inflation rate in several years during the 1970s,
- an explosive growth of U.S. farm exports overseas, and
- the idea promoted by the federal government that American farmers must "feed the world."

Things looked bright economically for farmers in the late 1970s. Many of them expanded heavily, borrowing large sums of money by using the land they already owned as collateral.

"After American farmers made such heavy commitments, the government abruptly changed the rules," Brake contends.

Among these governmental "rule changes" was a decision made in October 1979 by the Federal Reserve Board to focus less on interest rates as an indicator of sound economic policy.

"In other words, the Fed decided to focus on money supply while allowing interest rates to go where they would. Before this, money supply and interest rates were used together as indicators of monetary policy. If the interest rate climbed more than two points, alarm bells rang," Brake says.

As a result, the government did control inflation, but primarily through extremely high interest rates. Continued high interest rates in this country pushed up the value of the dollar overseas. This made U.S. agricultural products more expensive compared with those produced in other countries.

"So, what had been a booming growth in the export market went flat, and with the government's suggestions that American farmers will feed the world," Brake points out.

Instead, the government began saying what it is saying today: "We cannont continue to support farmers who are poor managers."

Brake says that current farm problems are not so much from poor farm management as from off-the-farm factors that are beyond the farmer's control.

He believes that steps now being taken by the government to bail out financially strapped farmers will be productive only if lower interest rates accompany the current low inflation rate or if farm product prices improve substantially so that farmers can pay their interest charges.

"Only then will economic conditions again favor farming," Brake notes.

The Agricultural Adjustme

Editor's Note – Below is a summary of the 1985 Farm Bill submitted to Congress recently by the Reagan Administration. The summary, which was compiled by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, lists the objectives and key provisions of the bill.

In 1985, the law that currently governs the agricultural commodity programs will expire, as will the authorities for agricultural research and associated programs and foreign food aid programs.

If no new legislation is enacted this year, the research and food aid programs will cease to operate after 1985. Price and income support programs for agricultural producers, however, will be governed by non-expiring "permanent" legislation that was enacted in the 1930's and 1940's.

The Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1985 (AAA of 1985) is designed to chart a new course for agriculture–a path that is market-oriented yet provides a compassionate transition period until the sector makes the necessary adjustments.

It provides a more long-term, consistent agricultural policy that ebbs and flows with the market and allows adjustments to occur because the farmer can respond to the marketplace rather than to government program provisions.

The AAA of 1985 also permits the U.S. farmer to challenge his competitors in world markets rather than aiding and abeting them by accepting a disproportionate share of the adjustments to world market developments.

It also addresses the difficult and important issues such as soil and water erosion and agricultural credit in a direct but reasonable manner.

Basic Objective

In developing the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1985, the Administration has been guided by the need to achieve certain objectives in any legislation.

If these objectives can be met the U.S. agricultural sector will continue to be the most efficient, productive and competitive industry in this country and, indeed, in the world.

• Long Term Agricultural Policy. The AAA of 1985 focuses on creating a policy environment that will be relatively stable and predictable, so that farmers can make realistic investment and production decisions. This contrasts with the current environment, in which agricultural policy responds to short-term problems without providing any effective long-term solutions.

• Market Orientation. Price and income support levels in the AAA will be tied to a moving average of past market prices. Farmers will then have an opportunity to respond to market signals, rather than producing in response to the artificial support rates set by Government programs.

• Enhance U.S. Competitiveness. In recent years, the world recession, the high value of the dollar and problems of debtor nations have made it very difficult for U.S. agricultural commodities to compete in the international marketplace. The rigid and high levels of U.S. price and income supports have aggravated this problem. The Administration's proposed Farm Bill will allow U.S. producers, who are extremely efficient, to better compete in world markets rather than withdrawing from the market as a result of inflexible price supports and increasing acreage reduction programs.

• Orderly Transition. The bill provides for a five-year transition period from current programs to more market-oriented programs. This will allow farmers to assess their operations and decide how to manage their resources most effectively in the new environment.

• Equity and Consistency. Under current legislation, the program for each agricultural commodity bears little relationship to the others. The Administration's proposal would put producers on an equal footing by providing the same relative level of income and price support after the five-year transition period. In addition, the legislation, integrates the objectives of the commodity programs with other agricultural programs and policies.

• Budget Restraint. In a time of large budget deficits, high interest rates, and a strong dollar, it is imperative that we exercise fiscal restraint and remove the entitlement nature of agricultural programs and policies. This legislation recognizes the need to impose finite cost control over our farm programs. The AAA is estimated to cost less than half as much as a continuation of current programs over the FY 1987-91 period.

Major Provisions

Domestic Commodity Programs

For wheat, feedgrains, cotton and rice, producers will continue to be eligible for government loans and income supports through the use of target prices which provide deficiency payments to producers. The loan level would be set each year at 75 percent of the previous three-year average of market prices. Target prices would be set at 100 percent of this same price average in 1986; the percentage would then decline each year until it reaches 75 percent for the 1991 and succeeding crops.

To be eligible for loans and deficiency payments, producers would be required to participate in voluntary acreage reduction programs in 1986, 1987, and 1988. For the 1989 and succeeding crops, authority for acreage reduction and other supply control programs would be eliminated.

A portion of CCC inventories of wheat and feed grains would be maintained to meet domestic and international humanitarian needs. Authority for the farmer-owned reserve currently in place would cease, as would the authorities for several special purpose emergency reserves now operated by the Government.

The soybean program would continue to rely solely on loans, but the loan rate would be determined in the same manner as for wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice. No acreage reduction program would be available for soybeans.

The current dairy purchase program would continue to operate in fiscal years 1986 and 1987, with

Corn & crops day

BELMONT CORNERS – The 1985 Corn Clinic and Crops Day will be held March 27 from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. at the Belmont Fire Hall, on route 371.

This year's meeting will emphasize the new Penn State soil test revisions, nitrogen application on corn, weed control in corn and hay crops, no-till sod seedings, and an update on the new perennial ryegrass varieties.

Speakers for the session include Pennsylvania State University Agronomy Specialists - Douglas Beegle, Sidney Bosworth, and Thomas Lanini.

The annual event is normally conducted at the Worthington Scranton Campus of Penn State, Lackawanna County. County farmers have an excellent opportunity to attend a regional agronomy meeting locally.

Lunch fee is $2.00. Advance reservations are required by Friday, March 22. Call the Wayne County Extension Office at 253-5970 Ext. 114, to place a lunch reser-the support price geared to expected Government purchases. Then, beginning in fiscal year 1988, the program would be converted to a direct payment program with the target price calculated as a declining percentage of the market prices for the preceding three years, in the same manner as the other commodities.

Peanuts are currently produced under a restrictive quota system that guarantees a high price for peanuts produced for domestic edible use, and a much lower price for non-quota peanuts that are exported or crushed for oil. The Administration's proposal would phase out this system. Loan rates would be set at 75 percent of the three-year average price and would be available to all producers. Those who have quotas would receive a direct payment based on a declining percentage of the market prices for the preceding three years.

Beginning with the 1986 crop year, sugar producers would be eligible for direct payments while processors would continue to be eligible for price support loans.

Loans and direct payments made to producers under this legislation will be targeted to medium and small-sized farms. Beginning in 1986, loans made on all program commodities will be nonrecourse up to a crop year limit of $200,000 per producer. This means that the commodities may be signed over to the government in full satisfaction of a producer's loan obligation. Amounts above $200,000, however, would be recourse loans. A producer would be required to repay the full value of the loan plus interest, just as he would for any commercial transaction.

All direct payments made for commodities covered by this bill will be limited to $20,000 per person in 1986, $15,000 per person in 1987, and $10,000 per person in 1988 and succeeding years.

Agricultural Trade and Export Expansion

A major component of the AAA of 1985 is the establishment of a formal and explicit agricultural trade policy which is consistent with our domestic agricultural policy. The major provisions provide a commitment on the part of the U.S. Government to promote open access in world markets for U.S. agricultural exports. The provisions firmly establish the U.S. as a reliable supplier of agricultural commodities by eliminating the use of agricultural embargoes on a selective basis and by guaranteeing sanctity of export contracts.

Additionally, the provisions seek expanded trade by negotiating with our key trading partners to implement programs which reduce restrictive trade practices. The Secretary of Agriculture and the U.S. Trade Representative are to report to Congress on the extent and impact of trade barriers on agricultural exports.

In the event that negotiations to remove or reduce barriers, including export subsidies, are not progressing satisfactorily, the Secretary of Agriculture and the U.S. Trade Representative are to submit a report recommending what sections will be taken to offset the effects of such barriers.

Export expansion programs are continued with the GSM-102 Export Credit Guarantee program set at a level consistent with the credit needs of countries which are importing U.S. agricultural products and meet creditworthiness requirements. The P.L. 480 foreign food aid programs are reauthorized.

Agricultural Research, Teaching and Extension

The major change proposed is a greater emphasis in research and extension on increasing the efficiency and profitability of the farm enterprise rather than just its productivity. The current research system is efficient and flexible enough to meet anticipated needs, as witnessed by the emerging use of biotechnology.

Resource Conservation

The resource conservation portion of the Farm Bill contains strong "sodbuster" provisions. Under these provisions any operator who begins tilling erodible soils that had not been in production for the past 10 years would be ineligible to obtain any Federal farm program benefits. The only exception would be for producers who follow a plan approved by the local conservation district.

Agricultural Credit

The AAA of 1985 shifts all Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) loasn for new borrowers from direct to guaranteed lending beginning in fiscal year 1986. It further provides for a phasing out of existing direct operating loans by fiscal year 1990. In addition, the multi-peril all risk crop insurance is substituted for the FmHA emergency lending program.

Pa. first in surplus food distribution

HARRISBURG – State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell today announced that Pennsylvania now ranks first in the nation among major states in distribution of federal surplus foods to the needy through the U.S. Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program. The Secretary said "unselfish and untiring efforts" by county commissioners, local agencies and volunteers had enabled this fine record.

"The Food and Nutrition Service of the USDA has notified us that Pennsylvania is the leader – at 11.29 pounds per capita – among the state distributing high volumes of these federal surplus foods," Hallowell said. "The Commonwealth has also moved up to third among all states in the quantity of foods distributed through the TEFAP program, with 133,950,304 pounds distributed through March."

Hallowell said the USDA value of these foods, including cheddar and process American cheese, butter, cornmeal, instant milk, flour, rice and honey, distributed in Pennsylvania is approximately $170 million.

About two million Pennsylvanians are eligible to receive these foods products, a figure which suggests that the average eligible Pennsylvanian has received 67 pounds of food at no cost since the program's inception in February 1982.

The Agriculture Secretary again cited the work performed at the local level in this massive distribution effort. "Pennsylvania has developed a progressive system for distribution of these foods to the truly needy in all 67 counties, he said. "Utilizing the tremendous resources provided by local governments and volunteers, Pennsylvania has responded effectively to the needs of our less fortunate citizens."

Hallowell said only California and New York had distributed more surplus foods than Pennsylvania. He noted that the volunteer system in Pennsylvania has distributed from 1.65 to 7.93 pounds per capita more than neighboring states.

"We are greatly pleased at the continuing progress of this system and at the unselfish and untiring efforts by volunteers to make it a success," Hallowell said.

Expert outlines effects of a 'Market-oriented' farm policy

Farm policy makers are debating the merits of a market-oriented farm policy versus continuing or modifying programs that have evolved over the past 52 years. What is meant by "market-oriented," and how would such a policy affect U.S. farmers and consumers? Also, how would it likely affect area farmers?

"In its pure form, market-oriented means elimination of price and income supports," explains Gerald F. Vaughn, University of Delaware extension farm policy specialist. "Farmers would have to gear their capacity and output to market demands and prices. And they would be more vulnerable to agriculture's inherent instability, which begins with the weather and extends to economic forces."

Market prices would be lower and more variable for those who produce commodities now covered by farm programs, the economist says. These farmers would probably try to sustain output and profits by reducing expenses for inputs such as fertilizer, fuel, and machinery. Marginal cropland would not be planted.

According to Vaughn, the reduced demand for farm inputs would likely lead to lower input prices. Soil conservation and water quality would also benefit since much highly erosive land would go out of cultivation.

In time, the economist says, the market for lower-priced farm products ought to expand under such a policy. But how much and how soon?

"If the government adopts a market-oriented farm policy," says Vaughn, "American consumers probably will benefit because of a slower rise in food prices. The percentage of income spent on food may ease downward. Per capita food consumption may even rise slightly."

The potential effects on international trade are less clear. "While high supports can price U.S. farmers out of world markets, it is uncertain whether removing such supports will price them in," the economist warns.

"This would depend on the ability of American farmers to produce at lower cost than our overseas competitors, some of whom also are subsidized and/or now have technology equal to or better than ours," he says. "In the last few years, these competitors have captured world markets the U.S. has lost. They aren't likely to give up these markets easily. The strong dollar also works against the expansion of U.S. farm exports, even with price supports removed.

"Even if lower prices help expand domestic and world markets for U.S. farm products and lead to lower production costs, the recent depressed level of net farm income could not be expected to rise quickly," cautions the specialist. "And with greater risk due to the absence of price supports and no improvements in income, we could expect the recent decline in the value of farm assets and equity to continue." Farmland values across the nation could drop one-third, on the average. Financing farm operations would become increasingly difficult.

Under a market-oriented farm policy, the least efficient and most highly leveraged farmers would be forced out of business. "Close to 400,000 farms could be involved," Vaughn says. "This would reduce the number of U.S. farms from today's 2.4 million to around 2 million by 1990, compared to around 2.3 million if farm programs are continued and made more generous." Ultimately, though, after large-scale changes in farm ownership, an equilibrium would be reached and asset values and equity could be expected to stabilize.

Eliminating price and income supports would limit farm program costs essentially to those involved in financing disposal of Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) and farmer owned reserve stocks. These stocks probably would be exhausted by the late 1990s.

"If everything worked out as intended under a market-oriented policy," says Vaughan, "after perhaps five years without supports, the farm economy would emerge with sharply fewer farmers producing at lower cost and in a stronger position to compete. For producers who remain, as well as those who leave, the adjustment could be hard."

Some observers feel a market-oriented farm policy is totally wrong and propose instead various program alternatives. Others believe market orientation is needed but feel that ending supports abruptly would be unwise and so offer various transition options.

"Any move toward such a U.S. farm policy will probably have to include transition provisions if it hopes to pass the Congress," Vaughn says. Such transition options would maintain minimum government supports for some set period. Loan rates, for example, might be adjusted up or down as a fixed percentage (not too high) of a moving average market price. Production controls, if used at all, would probably not be tight. And target prices would be eliminated as soon as possible.

How would area agriculture be affected by a market-oriented farm policy?

With loose production controls or none at all, corn and soybean acreage would increase nationwide, the economist believes. Prices and per-acre returns to growers would drop.

Expert says U.S. Ag must be efficient, competitive

Farmers are in for a tough time in 1985 as they struggle to increase profits in a period of stagnating demand, high interest rates and low prices. But the stage is being set for U.S. agriculture to become more efficient and competitive as new export policies, a new farm bill and a change in the focus of research enable demand for U.S. ag products to grow and allow U.S. farmers to become more productive.

In a series of interviews in Soybean Update, the weekly marketing newsletter of the American Soybean Association, people representing different sectors of the agricultural community gave their attitudes and expectations about U.S. agriculture in the coming year.

The major challenge for U.S. agribusiness in 1985 is to become more competitive in the world market, says Don Leavenworth, vice president of the oilseed processing group for Cargill, Inc.

"All agriculture needs to focus on efforts to reduce the cost of production, to improve the efficiency of processing and handling and to improve the price competitiveness of U.S. farm products," says the Cargill executive.

U.S. agriculture needs to change from the "passive mind frame" of being a residual supplier to the aggressive role of a "preferred supplier," stresses Leavenworth. U.S. farm policy must be consistent with a competitive world market situation.

Rebuilding markets is not an easy task, Leavenworth notes. Lower prices might be necessary to gain back markets, but the end result will be a stronger U.S. ag system.

Farmers must operate their farms as a business as well as a production unit, says Porter Robinson, vice president of agribusiness lending for the Union Planters National Bank of Memphis. Lending institutions need to understand their role in helping farmers become better businessmen, and banks should work with farmers as financial planners and counselors, he says.

Banks should encourage a thorough investigation of all marketing alternatives to protect farmers from market volatility and reduce the farmer's risks, Robinson says. Farmers should become familiar with hedging techniques and the opportunities that ag options offer.

Another big challenge for U.S. farmers will be to successfully manage finances during a period of high interest rates and low prices, says John Campbell, University of Illinois dean of agriculture. The University of Illinois is looking at the "systems approach to agricultural research." Using this system, all aspects of farming are studied – including financing, planting and marketing – and then the very best management practices are applied in all these areas.

Campbell stresses the continued need of production research at the university level, saying that "one of the reasons U.S. agriculture is so successful is because U.S. farmers are so efficient and productive. Plus, if the United States doesn't keep on with production research, other countries will pass us by."

'Market-oriented' policy

"This would lower wholesale and retail prices and boost per capita consumption, encouraging broiler output to expand faster than it might under current conditions," Vaughn says.

For U.S. agriculture as a whole, unfortunately, even the transition to a market-oriented policy might reduce net farm income as much as 30 percent below recent distress levels before improvement would begin, he concludes. "In the short run, land values would continue to fall. The advantage to government would be the reduction of direct farm program costs by perhaps 80 percent.

Thus, the issue becomes: Should American farmers be asked to adjust to a total market orientation? And, if so, what's the fairest way to make the transition?"

Senate Ag Committee sets hearings on '85 Farm Bill

WASHINGTON – Senator Jesse Helms, Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, today announced a series of full committee hearings on the 1985 farm bill.

The major farm membership organizations have been invited to testify in the morning session.

"The purpose of this opening hearing is to receive testimony on the broad, general issues facing Congress as we write the 1985 farm bill," said Helms. "Testimony will focus on the problems with current agriculture policy and the options for changing it."

"Following this opening hearing, the Committee will hold a series of 6 hearings on broad themes of agriculture policy. These thematic hearings will be important in helping us understand the ramifications of current policy, how the various farm programs interrelate, exactly who is affected by government policy, and what must be done to correct the current confusion in agriculture policy."

Following the thematic hearings, the committee will hold a series of hearings on the commodity programs and specific legislative proposals before the committee. This set of hearings will be held from March 21 through April 11, and specific dates will be announced as these hearings are scheduled.

Dates for the thematic hearings are as follows:

- Tuesday, March 19 – Impact of technology and research on agriculture policy
- Wednesday, March 20 – Capital investment, debt, credit, and taxes in agriculture policy.
- Date uncertain – Critical analysis of agriculture policy options for 1985.

State's red meat down 20%

HARRISBURG – Pennsylvania's commercial red meat production, on a dressed weight basis, totaled 80.3 million pounds during January, down 20 percent from a year ago, according to the Pennsylvania Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Beef slaughter, at 97.2 million pounds liveweight, was down six percent from January 1984. Total head slaughtered was 83,600, down three percent, and liveweight averaged 1,162 pounds, a decrease of 27 pounds. Veal slaughter was 4.5 million pounds liveweight, up six perecent. Calf slaughter of 27,500 head was up nine percent while the average liveweight decreased four pounds to 165 pounds.

Hog slaughter, at 38.5 million pounds liveweight, was down 44 percent from a year earlier. Total head slaughtered was 151,500, down 45 percent but the average liveweight increased five pounds to 236 pounds. Lamb and mutton slaughter was 1.4 million pounds liveweight, up 14 percent. The number slaughtered was 13,300, up 12 percent and the average liveweight increased one pound to 106 pounds.

U.S. commercial red meat production in January totaled 3.42 billion pounds, up six percent from January 1984. Comparing January 1985 with January 1984, beef production at 2.07 billion pounds was up eight percent. Total head killed at 3.28 million was up five percent, and average liveweight increased 15 pounds to 1,081. Veal production at 43 million pounds increased 10 percent from a year ago. Calf slaughter of 288,000 head was up four percent, and the average liveweight increased seven pounds to 247.

Pork production totaled 1.28 billion pounds, up four percent from a year ago. The 7.34 million head killed was up two percent, and the average liveweight increased three pounds to 245. Lamb and mutton production, at 32 million pounds, wa sup three percent. Slaughter totaled 557,000 head, up one percent, and the average liveweight increased two pounds to 115 pounds.

7 Pa. corn growers win in national contest

UNIVERSITY PARK – Seven Pennsylvania corn producers who competed in the 1984 National Corn Growing Contest were recently named recipients of awards for high production.

"Each contestant was required to have the harvest measured over a 10-acre area," said Dr. Joseph McGahen, Extension agronomist at the Pennsylvania State University. "Yield data were compared with those growers in 40 other states to determine contest winners. All award winners received ribbons."

The contest is sponsored annually by the National Corn Growers Asssociation in cooperation with the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service, Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, and hybrid seed corn industry.

Winners in the non-irrigated class were Richard Snyder, of Montoursville, with a yield of 191.5 bushels per acre; Jeffrey Mitchell, of Honey Brook, 189.7 bushels per acre; and Edward Snook, of Jersey Shore, 186.7 bushels per acre. Snyder planted the 0's Gold 2570 variety; Mitchell, Dekalb-Pfizer XL71; and Snook, Pioneer Brand 3540.

Brook Lawn Farm, of Lancaster, was a national winner in the irrigated class with a yield of 150.2 bushels per acre. The corn variety grown was Dekalb-Pfizer T1100.

Winners in the no-till class were Frank White, of Muncy, with a yield of 175.8 bushels per acre; Jeff Pontius, of Sunbury, 174.7 bushels per acre; and Con-Jer Farms, of Annville, 166.3 bushels per acre. White planted the Pioneer Brand 3352 variety; Pontius, Northrup King PX-74; and Con-Jer Farms, Dekalb-Pfizer T1100.

Dr. McGahen pointed out that corn is grown on 39 percent of the cultivated acres in the state. The value of the state's corn crop exceeds one-half billion dollars annually.

Census ag chief

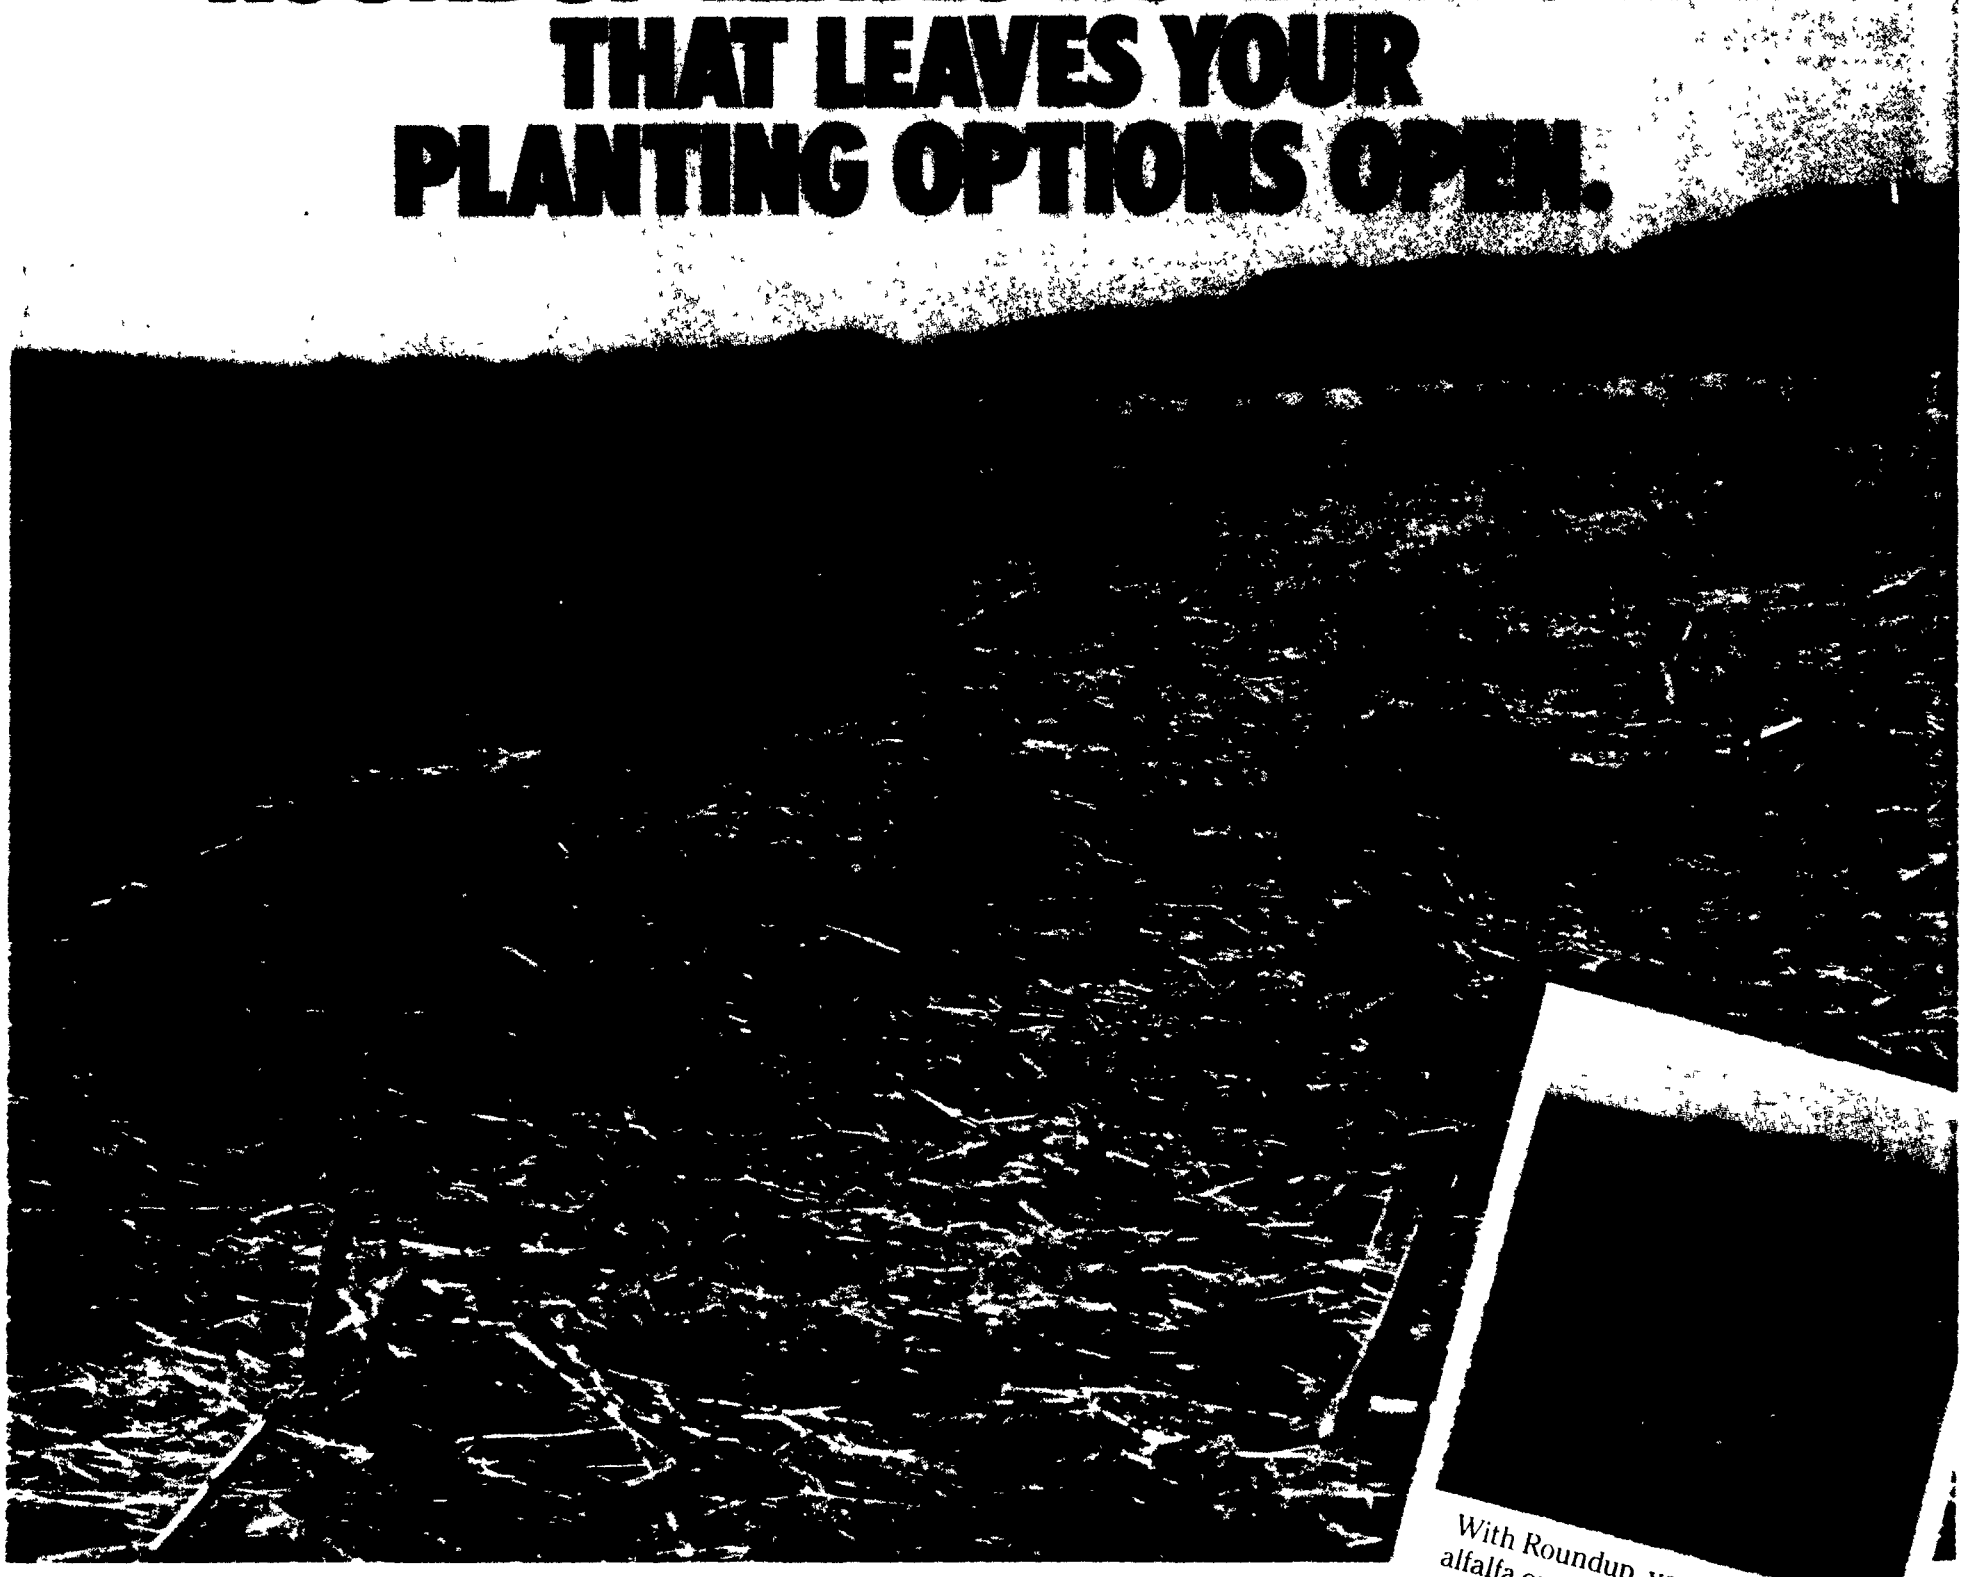
WASHINGTON – Dr. Charles P. (Bud) Pautler, Jr., 37, has been appointed chief of the Census Bureau's Agriculture Division, Dr. John G. Keane, director of the Commerce Department agency, announced.

The division conducts an agricultural operations census every five years as well as surveys for other federal agencies. The next census will be in 1987.

Dr. Pautler previously was an assistant division chief in research and methodology. He served as statistics branch chief of the Agriculture's Department's agriculture marketing service from 1980 to 1983 and was employed for 10 years by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

A native of Murphysboro, Ill., Dr. Pautler graduated from St Louis University, obtained his master's degree from the University of Missouri, and his doctorate from George Washington University. He currently is an adjunct professor at Georgetown University's School of Business Administration.

ROUNDUP® LEAVES NO CARRYOVER. THAT LEAVES YOUR PLANTING OPTIONS OPEN.



With Roundup, you can rotate to alfalfa or any labeled crop as early as three days after application.

With one quart per acre Roundup® herbicide this spring, you're not only buying affordable, season long quackgrass control, you're also buying cropping flexibility. Because Roundup doesn't carryover in the soil, you can rotate to alfalfa or any labeled crop as early as three days after application.

Add nonionic surfactant. (Use 2 quarts per 100 gallons of spray solution for surfactants containing more than 50% active ingredient. Or 4 quarts per 100 gallons of spray solution for those with less than 50% active ingredient.)
